

After the Federation falls, the SC reaches out to affected worlds with aid and exchange programs. A young Yulpa, seeing the strain the war's loss has on their community, decides to give the exchange a go. After all, they've faced wild predators once or twice before, and besides, it'll probably be someone who used to be prey, before Humans convinced them to take up flesh-eating like their barbaric ancestors. Or maybe one of the squishy-looking Humans themselves. But it's not like they're gonna get paired up with an Arxur, right? Right?

...oh. Their exchange partner is, in fact, an Arxur.

(this is either after NoP2, or in an AU where the SC didn't exile the Arxur Collective)

-- Or --

A Yotul makes a blog reviewing and rating what sharing a bed with different species for a night is like. From preparing for bed, to getting comfy together, to sleeping, and to getting up and ready in the morning (or equivalent, if they visit VP/Skalga). Write a few entries, and maybe even the comments sections as well.

Species selection is fully up to the author, but if suggestions are needed, I suspect that Gojid, Drezjin, and of course Human would be interesting picks.