

Chalice of Irreversibility (cursed)

(from "Prince of Lankmar", with a DM Superelf Addendum)

This cup is owned by Purdue Darkwolf, but it will never be used by him until well after the time he gains immortality through lichdom. When this transformation occurs, he will spend a great deal of time studying his books and searching for power and knowledge.

The chalice of irreversibility is merely an item of revenge used by Purdue to get even with living mortals for past crimes against him. He also uses it under dire circumstances to rid himself of opponents he feels are too powerful to destroy without risk of death to himself.

The chalice's magic is invoked only when fluid is poured into it and drunk. When that occurs, the character drinking from the chalice is frozen in level. Never again can the person gain experience points and levels, nor can skills and statistics be improved. The person still continues to age normally.

Magical improvements on statistics do not penetrate the shell of antimagic that the chalice places around the character's body.

The effects of the chalice of irreversibility are permanent. If dispel magic or remove curse spells are cast upon the infected character, they are ineffectual. The only way that the magical curse can be dispelled is by the use of a wish spell.

DM Superelf Addendum: A Limited Wish will remove the level freeze for 3 months. Alter Reality will remove the level freeze for 4 months, and Imperfect Wish will remove it for 6 months.
