HOW TO START:

1. Have a webpage with your characters!

Characters may be OCs (original characters) or characters from pre-existing media. For pre-existing media, you must have your own spin on them! Like an AU, or just them wearing different shoes or a hat or something.

I use neocities to code my own website (that gets you special ticket points). Some people use refsheet.net (free) or toyhou.se (need invite). Weebly, Wordpress, Blogger, Blogspot, even Tumblr, any hosting platform works! You do not have to spend money to have a site!

2. Upload adequate reference for your character!

I recommend at least one full body visual reference. You may also use a moodboard with photos bashed together for reference, or a very detailed written description. Written descriptions may not be the most accurate for visual art, so please allow for interpretation!

3. Fill out the template in #artcade-directory! Include a link to your site, and write “permissions” for your characters, and optionally a “squick list!”.

And whether you’d allow people to post their fanart to their own website or social media, and if you’d like to be @’d. You can have different permissions for each character.

Failure to adhere to others’ squicks may result in your piece being ineligible for Ticket points.

Please write your squicks as non-judgmentally as possible, you don’t have to add commentary on why you think it’s gross.

re: art trades
Yes	No thank you
Please objectify, sexualize, and fetishize my non-human characters and adult male characters! Or have them in horror/gory situations!	No sexual violence towards my teenage (and younger) characters, or fem characters. Especially Liv.
Feel free to have our characters interacting with each other!	No pee or poo pls.
Have fun with my characters' presentation, fashion, and hairstyles!

4. Make your art! Any form of art is valid! You can begin drawing or drop out at any time. It’s all for fun, don’t feel pressured!

5. Submit it in the appropriate channel for visual art, writing, and other! And tag whoever’s character you drew!

6. SCUMSUCK will tally your Tickets in the events channel for you, and keep count in a post! If you have issues or questions with your Tickets, let me know.

7. If someone made art for you, you MUST thank them! And you MUST feel peer pressure to trade art with them! Have good manners, and don’t be mean or whine about free art! FEEL THE LOVE!!!

8. At the end of the event, we’ll put our art together so our OCs and faves can have a celebration pizza party with the Pizza Slut at Chonky Cheez! Yay!

Other RULEZ

★ Keep your expectations realistic. This is a free for fun art event, and we all have different skill sets and experience levels! Not everyone can paint the Sistine Chapel in a month, let alone a week :p

★ If there are certain features that are really important to your character that should never be changed, please make note of it in your permissions.

Ex: Please don't draw in jeans, sweatpants only.

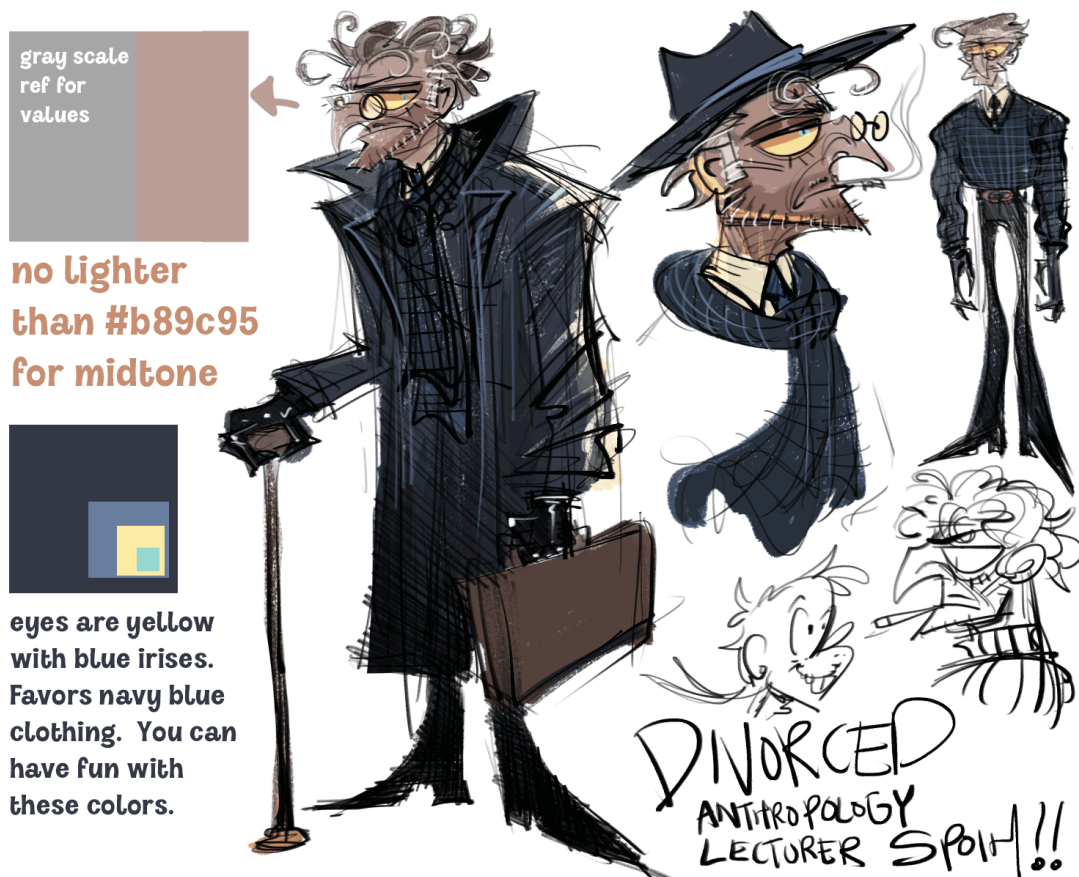

Ex: Please don't go lighter for the skintone than my ref!

★ Be respectful of other server members by remaining as faithful as you can to their characters' skintone and body type. This rule regards a big issue we've noticed within art communities recently, so we wanted to specifically mention it. There's plenty of leeway for stylistic choices, just don't go extreme by making someone opposite of what they are!

Ex: Don't make dark complexion characters pale peach, and don't make fat characters stick thin.

Artists: When in doubt, (if coloring your art) color pick your recipient's reference! If you aren't sure about something, consider contacting your recipient, or us as a last resort.

Recipients: Please be kind to people who are thoughtful enough to contact you with questions, it means they are acting in good faith and want to make sure they get your character right! Consider setting up a ref sheet with swatches like this:

Our rules are always changing and updating as we learn and improve. This is our first event like this, and it was spur of the moment! So please send us feedback for improvement, and let us know if you had fun and if we're doing good!

Don't forget, you're here forever!!!!
