- "In honor of Hispanic Heritage month, the Science Department would like to honor Dr. Lydia Villa-Komaroff.
  Who is Lydia? She earned her PhD in Cell Biology from MIT then went on to do research at a little school called Harvard before going back to MIT.
  At Harvard, she was involved with discovering that bacteria can be used to make insulin!
  What's insulin? It is needed for your body to function but some diabetic people can not make enough insulin in their own body so they have to buy insulin and it can sometimes be costly! 'INSULIN MAKING BACTERIA' has helped with that issue!
  Way to go Dr. Villa-Komaroff!"

- Join the Science Department in celebrating Bernardo Alberto Houssay (1887 – 1971) for Hispanic Heritage Month. Dr. Houssay was an Argentine physiologist who was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine in 1947. His groundbreaking discovery that pituitary hormones not only influence but regulate the amount of glucose (blood sugar) in mammals paved the way for doctors across the globe to provide better patient care to those suffering from diabetes. Dr. Houssay was also an advocate for university education and scientific research across his home country of Argentina as the principal founder and director of the Institute of Biology and Experimental Medicine in Buenos Aires. His most famous work, Fisología Humana, is a cornerstone textbook for Latin American medical education and is still used today.

- Join the Science department in celebrating Severo Ochoa for hispanic history month. Severo Ochoa (1905–1993) was a Spanish-American biochemist who won the 1959 Nobel Prize in Medicine for discovering an enzyme that made it possible to synthesize RNA, which advanced understanding of genetics. Growing up in Spain, he faced the early loss of his father at age seven and later political turmoil during the Spanish Civil War, which pushed him to continue his scientific work abroad. Despite these struggles, his persistence in research and education led him to become one of the leading molecular biologists of the 20th century.

  Will "Chunk" defend his crown?
  Fat Bear week is upon us!!!

  Fat Bear Week, which started in 2014, is an annual competition that celebrates the remarkable Transformation of Katmai (pronounced: cat-may) National Park's brown bears as they feast on Salmon and build the fat reserves they need to survive the winter. The bears go head-to-head in a Bracket-style tournament, with the public choosing which bear will be crowned Fat Bear Week Champion. Last year over 1,700,000 votes were cast from more than 100 countries before Bear 32 Nicknamed "Chunk" was crowned champion.

  The Fat Bear Week bracket will be revealed TODAY. The tournament and voting will take place

Terra Nova Daily Bulletin

Sept. 22-29 (no voting on the weekend), and the champion will be crowned Sept. 29, 2026.

Fans don't have to wait for the tournament to start scouting their favorites. Check out the menu bar of Explore.org or visit the park website at nps.gov/katm to learn more about the lives of the bears. Fat Bear Week is a partnership between the National Park Service, Explore.org, and the cat-may Conservancy.

Who will you vote for?

- Congratulations to Thursday's winner, Sophia Oropeza who guessed the organism as the California Red-legged frog.

Our Biodiversity week celebration ends today but we celebrate nature every day. Here's our final challenge.

Mystery Organism Challenge

I am an evergreen tree native to California's foggy coastal forests.

I can grow taller than a 30-story building and live for more than 2,000 years.

My thick, reddish-brown bark helps protect me from fire and insects.

I thrive in cool, moist environments and depend on coastal fog for moisture.

Final clue: Some of my relatives can be found right here in Northern California!

What am I?

If you know the answer, go to Ms. Gutierrez' room during lunch . The first to give the correct answer gets a prize.

Congratulations to Mason Heywood who guessed Wednesday's mystery organism as steelhead trout.

This week is California Biodiversity week and here is our

Mystery Organism Challenge

I am an amphibian that spends much of my life near ponds, streams, and wetlands.
I have a reddish-brown color and a distinctive dark stripe across my eye.
I am an important part of California's native biodiversity but have lost much of my habitat.
I am listed as a threatened species under the federal Endangered Species Act.
Final clue: My kind can be found at Sharp Park right here in Pacifica!

If you know the answer, go to Ms. Gutierrez at M203. The first to give the correct answer wins a prize.

I am born in freshwater streams and later travel to the ocean to grow.
When it is time to reproduce, I return to freshwater to lay my eggs.
I have a silvery body and am known for my powerful swimming ability.
Final clue: My kind has been documented in San Pedro Creek right here in Pacifica!

If you know the answer, go to Ms. Gutierrez at M203 during lunch today. The first to give the correct answer wins a prize.
