Hello everyone, sorry for keeping you guys in the dark for so long. As you may know the last two community posts were poor attempts at teasers and I feel bad for not communicating with you guys. I will start this off by saying thank you for the support and comments on the project. Now onto some important stuff. I will be crystal clear and honest with you guys and say that no development has been made. I made the project page when I was younger thinking it would be glossed over and to be a page for a project to be worked on later. Once a ton of people started viewing it I started making promises that I fully knew that I couldn't keep. I did try to get a team together but money was a huge factor and not knowing how to get one together in the first place. Now that I am older and coming back to the page, a huge guilt has rode over me and I feel I should apologize for the silence and lies. I still want to make this game. I have huge plans for it but I wanted to get this apology out of the way. If you hate me for lying I fully understand. My fault for being a stupid young teenager. Now I'm very cautious about this. I want to make a list of what I want to do and plan to do for this game. One is that I want to get a proper rig to develop and run the game to its greatest potential. That is the biggest hurdle because PCs are expensive. Now for the actual game itself I want to start by saying that everything I had planned for launch will have to be released over time but I will only go over that once I get actual development started. I would start a Kickstarter or a Gofundme but I don't want to look like or sound like I'm begging for money. I will try my best to communicate with you all in the future and update you if there is any progress on development. Now that you've made it to the end, thank you, if you want to hate me and stop supporting me because of my lying and silence I will understand. Sorry for the broken grammar and sentence structure it's 1 in the morning and needed to get this apology out.
