

Katie Dee is a long time lover of reading and writing based out of Nashville, Tennessee. Her background of Civil Engineering and career in the construction industry is balanced by spending her free time pursuing more creative endeavors, such as entering short story contests and tackling her ever-growing TBR list. She's been an active participant in microfiction contests such as NYC Midnights, Writing Battle, Curated Microfiction, and others. More recently she's pursued online and print publications for her work, and has been accepted on Black Hare Press, Sci-Fi Shorts, and Little Old Lady Comedy, among others. Katie has been attending in-person and online writing conferences and courses to learn more about the craft, and is excited to have begun working on her first full length novel. Recently, Katie became an editor at a new literary magazine, and will be a guest judge for an upcoming charity writing contest.

When she's not working or writing, Katie is spending time with her husband and their dog, Mabel; interacting with her tight-knit writing community on Discord; or raiding her pantry for snacks.

You can contact Katie Dee at katiedeewrites@gmail.com or via Instagram @katiedeewrites