

Respect being number one and respect for yourself both as a woman but also just as a human being on this earth To always treat people with dignity and respect no matter who they are whether they are the janitor or the president of a company. To never remember where you came from and that you are no more important than the next person. That success and being in the public eye or having people say nice things about you are ephemeral, like it is here one day and gone the next moment. So never take yourself too seriously because you shouldn't. It's that simple.
