

Among the old families of Prenditus is the Sulmare family, a bloodline of purely Laicar that stretches back as far as anyone can remember. Throughout their lineage are various generals, great smiths, and law makers. Currently the two upcoming heirs are Renzo and his Spurii sister Fiora.

The two of them are the children of Marius II Sulmare who is the head of Cataphractos, a smithing company that provides armor and weapons among other goods. Behind the scenes, Marius' "retired" father works in black markets to cause strife and conflicts, all to sell more arms to both sides. Even worse, the old man profits from a slave trade, one that he tried to sell his Spurii granddaughter into many times.

Due to a rash of break ins in and around Prenditus, all at the hands of Fiora, an inspector has begun following her trail. Marius I caught wind of these as well, and has renewed his attempts to scrub the family of her impure blood.

To save face and prevent the family business from being brought to ruin by the inspector, Marius II sent his children both to Terminus. There they are publicly trying to expand the family business, with their pre-paid apartment being the only real thing to welcome them.

Appearance

Fiora's mother passed on only a few Velen features. Along her collarbone, elbows, knees, wrists, ankles and knuckles are patches of azure blue scales. Her fingernails do sharpen over time unless she keeps them maintained. Webbing stretches between her toes, but not her fingers, and a pattern of blue is etched into her otherwise lacair skin. Since she was young she learned to breathe water even though she lacks gills. All of her Velen features remain hidden under layers of clothing and gloves she almost never removes. To further hide her Velen heritage, her hair color that matches the scales across her body is normally dyed a deep brown.

Persona

More so than anything, Fiora is very aware of her Velen heritage and she was raised from a young age to hide it as best as possible. She will keep her distance from nearly everyone unless every last scale is hidden carefully under layers of clothing. A consummate prankster besides that, Fiora has gotten into trouble with the authorities in the past. She tends to appear aloof, all while being curious about nearly everything. This same curiosity leads her to acts of larceny, exploring in places she has no business being in and taking what might not be legally hers. Fiora also loves to swim whenever she can sneak away from her family to do so, as long as there are no spectators.

History

Originally from Prendintus, Fiora's father Marius the second fell in love with a velen woman named Lucia. Their affair wouldn't have been an issue had Marius not been married already. After Fiora was born, her mother found out about Marius' other family. Shortly after, Fiora was left on Marius' doorstep. From then on she was the bastard child of the family, always getting into trouble. Out of boredom the spurii child began acts of petty larceny.

Appearance

Not taking after his musclebound boxing father entirely, Renzo still keeps fit by working away in the family forges. Small burn scars dot his arms from flying slag, normally hidden under longer sleeves he wears for business affairs. For the sake of his work, Renzo keeps his blonde hair fairly short, and dresses modestly. His shirts and vests normally have loose sleeves, so that he can roll them up if need be, exposing arms that are more muscled than would be expected. A wry smile usually marks his freckled face, as his hazel eyes are watchful for beautiful women.

Persona

Fiercely loyal to all of his family, including and especially his bastard sister, Renzo has been hard at work since he was first able to walk. Always he want to help out the family, and carry on the traditions and techniques that have existed for generations. He also has an innate curiosity a bit more tame than Fiora's, one he puts into learning about manufacturing and designing all sorts of items. One thing in life that always grabs at Lorenzo's attention is a beautiful woman, he acts like a fool and an ass until he's hit, or the woman agrees to a date.

History

Lorenzo was born to Helena and Marius the second of Prenditus, of the Sulmare family. At the age of two, he was introduced to a baby sister who changed his outlook on life. No matter what, he was always there to get her out of a bind. Even now that she's being sent to Terminus, he volunteered to travel with her so that he might be able to learn the art of Engineering from local artisans.
