Synopsis:

Mars is a romantic type. He ends up setting a lifelong goal, of one day kissing a girl. The problem is, he's a massive scaredy-cat. This, along with his earnest, simple nature, results in teasing from his friends. One late night, while bingeing his favorite type of movies, horror films, he notices his TV is acting weird. As it continues to do odd things, the atmosphere starts getting intense. It gets to the point where he is forced to turn the Tv off and head to bed. When he turns around, the TV turns back on. Too scared to turn back, he hears a horrible, crackling, rippling noise. Finally, mustering the courage to look back, he sees a ghostly girl, crawling out of the television. Believing that he is going to die, his mind flashes back to one thing. His lifelong dream. In that moment, he subconsciously makes the decision that he won't die without having kissed a girl. He quickly leans in and snags one from the monster in front of him. This causes the ghost to turn bright red in embarrassment.

She is ejected from the screen, and becomes a resident in the house, while also trying to avoid Mars. This goes on, until Mars manages to gain her trust. They start to come to a mutual understanding.

This starts a series of events that cause the ghost, Emi, to be stranded here. Causing the two to work together, to get her back to her realm, before it's too late.
