I have been living in Lakeland, FL since I moved to the US. He's an Industrial Engineer by career and has been working in the Supply Chain area for several years. He likes traveling and before having kids he used to travel around the world a lot with his wife.

Trading Journey

His first introduction to trading was while he was at college when his finance teacher decided to show them basic concepts of trading and even took them to his personal office and showed us his trading desk setup. He thought it was very interesting and cool but he never dug deep into it as he was focused on his studies. Once he arrived in the US, he started getting more interested when he got a 401K and started playing around with bitcoin in the very early days.

He decided that he needed to learn in the correct way, so he enrolled with a coaching group that focused on swing trading. He has had several ups and downs, quit and started again but his passion and interest for trading has always been there and he has decided to reach a point where he can make a living from trading.
