

20% Project Semester Two Scenario

Ever since your sophomore year in high school, you have had a passion for world history. The work of your incredibly talented teacher inspired you to devote your life to the study of history.

You graduated from college with honors from college with a major in World History. You spent years writing books and journal articles about history. You also have a respected career as a college professor. But after many years of excellence, you are “itching” to do something new.

You have heard about a new project being launched called the e-museum. This project will be an on-line museum that covers all human history and knowledge. It will essentially be wikipedia, but the information will be written by experts, and thus more accurate and reliable. They are hiring historians who are “experts” in their field to create “online museum exhibits” that will record the complete history of essentially every topic in human history.

The good news is that you have been chosen to create an exhibit on your area of expertise, _____.

You are going to be paid a cool $100,000 to complete the site on your topic.

What really has you excited, however, is that the five best sites will have their topics chosen to become real-life museum exhibits that will travel the world. If your site is chosen, you will be able to travel the world with your exhibit and be paid a cool $500,000! However, to win the prize, you must create your site and present it to the e-museum curators for their approval!

So.....get to work.....and try to win the big money and become famous!

Next, visit the requirements page to learn what you will be expected to do.
