

Tanelorn

An extra-dimensional city state originating from a parallel Earth, then in its 20th century, which was threatened by global thermonuclear war. The city, then based on an island at the approximate location of Bermuda, escaped from that dimension into an interdimensional space, from which it has been able to access a number of alternate worlds, trading with their residents to obtain the material needed for their civilization to function. This status has endured for at least a generation, though precise time measurement is not possible within Tanelorn.

Tanelorn covers approximately 55 km² and has a population of roughly 30 million humans, metahumans, mutants, aliens and robots. It is home to a group of beings dubbed "the guardians", who possess greatly enhanced abilities when in a region subject to "dimensional crisis", a state that results from contact between parallel realities. Tanelorn is in a constant state of dimensional crisis.

Tanelorn has a long-standing rivalry, bordering on an open war, with the corporations that rule over the Sprawl.
