

India and the United States have some common attributes, but also important distinctions. Although Indians and Americans both use handshakes to greet each other, men do not initiate handshakes with women in India. This is important because it shows how each culture respects gender in a different way. Another important difference between India and the US is the fact that in India it is customary to arrive late. This distinction is a powerful example that illustrates how different cultures view time. However, the US and India also have similarities including that both cultures have a deep respect for the older generation. This mutual trait shows that despite varied locations on the planet, each culture _____. By comparing India and the US it became clear that while there are a variety of cultural differences there are also a fair number of similarities.
