How can the Canadian Unitarian Council (CUC) and Canadian Unitarian Universalism be relevant and sustainable into the future?

The CUC is launching a national discussion about the future of Canadian Unitarian Universalism. In the coming months, we will be hosting conversations on how we, as an aspirational faith, can be relevant and sustainable into the future.

We are looking for a group of 10 individuals to coordinate the engagement process as members of the Living into the Future: Emergent Sustainability (LIFES) crew. This group will create the process for this initiative - a framework that will encourage our community to think "outside the box" as we imagine how things could be. We have created a broad Terms of Reference for the crew, which identifies the skills we need to move this initiative forward. It is important to us that the LIFES crew be as diverse as possible, with members representing various generations, experiences, and perspectives.

We invite you to consider applying to this crew or to share the Terms of Reference and/or this invitational video with Unitarian Universalists who you think might be interested, especially those who may experience barriers to full participation in society and in UU communities.

Please send questions and expressions of interest to future@cuc.ca by October 31, 2023.
