

Dear Colleagues,

Please circulate among those who might be interested in a Masters program in Environmental Science and Policy. A few slots are still available for students to start in September 2018.

Northeastern University in Boston is recruiting for a new Masters degree in Environmental Science & Policy. This program provides interdisciplinary training and environmental analysis and problem-solving expertise to the next generation of environmental professionals at the interface of science and policy. Prospective students from diverse backgrounds are encouraged to apply, and some fellowships are available. This program builds on Northeastern's leadership as an international leader in interdisciplinary experiential learning and the university's engaged research focused on sustainability, energy and resilience.

<https://cos.northeastern.edu/mes/academics/graduate/masters-degree-environmental-science-policy/>