“Important Announcement: BlissOS is now in lockdown!

Hello everyone,

This is an important announcement regarding the current status of the BlissOS project. We are officially placing the project under a temporary lockdown, effective immediately.

This lockdown means that all of our community chat platforms, including Matrix, Telegram, and Discord, will be locked. Furthermore, all BlissOS websites will be put under construction.

During this period, we strongly advise against downloading and installing BlissOS. The current versions will be incompatible with a newer base that we are preparing to deploy. This means that users on the current builds will not be able to perform OTA (Over-the-Air) or manual updates to the new system. A complete reinstallation from scratch will be required.

To prepare for the upcoming migration, we highly recommend all current users to back up their data. A great tool for this is Neo Backup, which you can find here. Taking the time to back up your applications and data now will ensure a smoother transition once the new version of BlissOS is released.

At this time, we cannot provide an estimated time of arrival (ETA) for when we will lift the lockdown. We will be posting further updates on the situation in the announcement channels of our chat platforms. Please keep an eye on those for the latest information.

We sincerely apologize for any inconvenience this may cause and we are incredibly grateful for your continued support and understanding.”
