

“The Third and Final Continent” Anticipation Guide

I. Before you begin reading “The Third and Final Continent”, read the statements below and decide whether you agree or disagree with them. Mark a “✓” in the appropriate space in the Before Reading Column.

Before Reading		Statement	After Reading
agree	disagree		agree	disagree
		1. Eating weird food is fun.
		2. People should marry for love.
		3. I enjoy hanging out with elderly people.
		4. Cultural traditions are more important than fitting into the culture in which you live.
		5. It's important to me what my family thinks about the lifestyle choices I make.
		6. I would move across the world for a better job.
		7. My home is a safe place both physically and emotionally.
		8. I would like to travel to far off countries and experience the different ways people live.
		9. Arranged marriages are a good idea.
		10. The physical places I have lived in (houses, homes, apartments, vans down by the river) are a source of memories.
		11. Emotional courage is more important than physical courage.

II. After reading “The Third and Final Continent”, decide if you still agree or disagree with each statement and mark a “✓” in the appropriate space under the After Reading column.

III. Chose three of the Anticipation Guide statements above and on the back of this paper describe how each statement relates to the book. I would suggest using statements in which you changed your own mind after the reading. (3 paragraphs: 10 pts each)
