

State, Society, and Religion in Hegel's Philosophy Syllabus

Course Code: ICS 153303 / 253303 S24

Dates: May 7 - June 20, 2024

Remote (Online Synchronous)

Tuesdays & Thursdays, 1 pm - 3 pm EST

Instructor: Dr. Andrew Tebbutt

This course explores the interrelation of political, social, and religious life in G. W. F. Hegel's thought. Students will be equipped to reflect critically on these domains of human experience by acquiring an understanding of Hegel's philosophy of religion and political philosophy. Readings will be drawn from Hegel's lectures on art and religion, as well as his works Elements of the Philosophy of Right and Phenomenology of Spirit. We will explore the political and social conditions of human experience through the lens of what Hegel calls "objective spirit," focusing in particular on how our freedom as self-conscious beings is enabled and supported by the domains of ethical life, law, and civil society. We will also explore Hegel's account of the human engagement in "absolute spirit," attending to the distinctive practices of art and religion, and to how these practices are interwoven with social and political life. We will also consider Hegel's role in the construction of the modern West's category of religion, and on what is involved in thinking about religion and religious difference (and Hegel's philosophy itself) beyond Eurocentrism.

Course Requirements

- Reading: 1250 pages, including both assigned reading and research for course paper. ●
- Participation: Students should prepare for and conduct themselves in class by being mindful of the elements that make for good conversation: engaging thoughtfully with the material, offering balanced contributions (neither dominating the discussion nor being too quiet), being oriented toward the shared agenda, being respectful of others, etc. ●
- In-seminar leadership: Students will assume the leadership responsibilities for a portion of one (or two, depending on enrolment and scheduling) of our class meetings. Further details will be provided in class.
- Research Paper: Students taking the course for credit will complete a research paper on a topic that arises from class reading and discussion (M.A. students, 3000-6000 words; Ph.D. students, 5000-7000 words).
- Weighting of elements to be evaluated:
 - Class participation: 15%
 - Seminar Presentation(s): 35%
 - Research Project/Paper: 50%
