Market Definition

Sorbitol, also known as glucitol, is a white, odourless crystalline powder that has 50-60% the sweetness of sucrose. It can be found in high concentrations in apples, peaches, plums, pears, and apricots. Sorbitol is a chemically inert and excipient-compatible polyol that is non-volatile, non-flammable, and non-corrosive. It is commercially produced through the electrolytic reduction of glucose and corn syrup.

Sorbitol Market Dynamics

Drivers

- The shift in consumer preference for organic sweeteners

The increased awareness of the negative effects of artificial and processed sugar on health is the primary motivator of the sorbitol market. People are increasingly turning to natural or organic sweeteners on a regular basis. Demand for low-calorie foods is also increasing, which increases demand for Sorbitol.

- The growing use of sorbitol in food industry

Due to its textural, moisture-stabilizing, and non-carcinogenic properties, the product's increasing use in chocolates and confectionary products is expected to boost market demand. Sorbitol is chemically relatively inert and a stable chemical, which leads to high demand for the product because it is simple to incorporate into other food products without interfering with the recipe. Sorbitol has a wide range of applications due to its unique and useful texture-enhancing properties, including the production of cosmetics.

Opportunity

Sugar price and supply fluctuations, as well as growing demand for sorbitol in the food and beverage industries, present an opportunity for the sorbitol market. People take sorbitol as a dietary supplement. It has a number of nutritional benefits, which are propelling the sorbitol market forward. Due to the increased awareness, organic or natural-based cosmetic and hygiene products are in high demand. It is also widely used in the production of oral and dental care products.

The form segment in the China region is expected to grow at the fastest rate during the forecast period of 2022 to 2029, owing to increased sorbitol demand and low production costs. Due to the rising demand for ready-to-eat and convenience foods, the form segment dominates the North American sorbitol market. Due to the presence of the most sorbitol providers in this country, France is leading the growth of the global market for form segment.

The country section of the report also provides individual market impacting factors and changes in market regulation that impact the current and future trends of the market. Data points like down-stream and upstream value chain analysis, technical trends and porter's five forces analysis, case studies are some of the pointers used to forecast the market scenario for individual countries. Also, the presence and availability of Global brands and their challenges faced due to large or scarce competition from local and domestic brands, impact of domestic tariffs and trade routes are considered while providing forecast analysis of the country data.
