

The brisk air of Eternia was whisking throughout the air. It was a bright October afternoon that every Snugzi could enjoy for themselves. In Eternia, the weather was always inclined to bring joy. Unlike Earth, which would be either too hot, and scorched like a volcano; or too cold and froze everything in its wintery wonderland. You could never tell with that turn-table of a planet.

The place of Eternia that was exceptionally bright and cheery today was a whimsical area known as the 'Sky Fishing' tree. A land of whimsy, and delight! A palace of magical clouds seated like pillows and every cloud you saw would most definitely hug any Snugzi back to sleep. Manta rays glowed and shimmered with every ray of stars that blew past. Jumping and twirling out of the cloudy waters of glistening ponds. It was exceptionally relaxing.

It seemed that one Snugzi in particular was keen on enjoying the sights, sounds, and sports of Sky Fishing! Grubbi! A Snugzi consisting of a purple, yellow - ish and pink - ish hue, with a blanket full of clouds, a shimmering twinkle dust, and a crawly bug - like appearance. It was hard to miss Grubbi out in the wild.

On this particular afternoon, Grubbi was floating in the clouds catching moon - rays. This particular day was special to Grubbi because today was the celebratory 'Moon Rush' in Eternia. A special day that only occurred once in a life - time and was a grand event for all Snugzis to perceive. Not only did the moon show up the entire day and capture the Sun's rays it also caused a rush of energy throughout Snugzi's and all the species alike. Which is unusual since everyone wants to catch some Z's in Eternia!

There was also a special item that Grubbi wanted to get their pincer paws on, a rare Eclipse Prism Fish. This Prism Fish only turned a deep ghostly and iridescent color under the moon rush light making it the rarest fish in Eternia. It is said that this fish can give a Snugzi any dream wish to their physical form that matches the fish's looks. Grubbi's favorite fish happened to be the Prism. He swore on this Moon Rush he would catch one. However, there was a troubling thought to Grubbi if the wish was granted the Prism Fish would be lost forever as it would disintegrate and become one with Eternia's stars.

Fish in general were very meaningful to this Grubbi fellow. So it was decided he would befriend this rarity of a fish and even make him a new home in Eternia, even if the wish was not granted at least he would fulfill his promise to catch the Prism Fish. Grubbi was a sweet - hearted fellow so in the very least he would respect the fish no matter how rare it was, or what wishes the fish could grant.

Before Grubbi could start hunting in this grand event Grubbi made a hasty decision to go meet with another adorable Snugzi named 'Grahams'; A yummy s'more puppy themed Snugzi with a fluffy marshmallow stuffing. He was in charge of running the local Snugzi fishing bait shop called 'Skyline Snores and S'mores'. A locally owned shop that also sold more than just average fishing lines, and fresh bait. But also a place where Snugzi's could get cozy and hang out with of course freshly coated S'mores and baked goodies under the homely and warm - blazing fireplace. It was open all year around no matter the occasion, and tonight was especially packed! Everyone and their mothers wanted their paws on the specialty bait for this night's 'Moon Rush'! Poor Grahams could not keep up enough with the piling orders from every Snugzi in sight!

As Grubbi entered the shop he was immediately met with capitalistic Snugzi horror as he watched every Snugzi in Eternia piled into one shop looking to get their paws on the special bait of the night. Every Snugzi was running around, collecting every bait and trinket on the shelves. Rushing, tripping on the floor boards and even other Snugzis that would cross their path of the item they wanted! It reminded Grubbi of what humans would call "Black Friday".

Upon further inspection of Grubbi entering the store he noticed Grahams was in quite the predicament. Grahams was at the cash register tired and looking like he was about to pass out, his water was all gone, and he had no place to think!

As soon as Grubbi noticed this he hastily crowd surfed through the Snugzi mountain and got to the front where Grahams was and asked if he needed any help. Grahams hastily nodded and pointed to the second register beside him. As soon as Grahams nodded Grubbi started going lightning fast with everyone's orders, bagging them, and checking each Snugzi out not missing a single order, or Plipz!

Grahams was impressed with Grubbi's speed and very thankful that he could be around to help him at his time of need and crippling exhaustion. Grahams finally got to drink his water, and get his much needed electrolytes to finish the shift, and as soon as they knew it they were done!

"Finally!" Grahams exclaimed as he plopped into the nearest Grahams cracker chair he could find. Grubbi chuckled and asked if he was okay, to which Grahams tiredly nodded and exhaled.

Grahams came to the conclusion Grubbi deserved at least something in return for his hard work and dedication. Grahams silently got up and trudged to his secret inventory box and came back with a special fishing rod and bait for each of them to use, carefully putting one of the fish and bait into Grubbi's paws.

Grubbi asked "Why are you giving me one of your special items?" To which Grahams replied "For all the hard work you helped me with tonight, if you did not come in here to help me I would've been done for and probably would have collapsed!" he chuckled.

Grubbi could not believe his eyes. He didn't think he would be able to snag one of the special baits for the moon rush tonight, all that mattered to him was helping Grahams but he was grateful for the gift! "Thank you!" Grubbi exclaimed, and Grahams smiled cheerfully back to him.

Grahams checked his Grahams cracker shaped watch and screamed "We're going to miss the Moon Rush lets go Grubbi!"

Grubbi was startled but quickly understood the urgency of the time and quickly followed Grahams who had already ran out of the door but not too fast as to not leave Grubbi behind.

Grahams and Grubbi ran all the way to the Sky Fishing tree with only a few minutes to spare. They swiftly and carefully took their special bait and rod and planted their spot at the highest spot of the tree that usually no Snugzi could get up to. Grahams even got both of them quick snacks for this Moon Rush!

Poor Grubbi was so excited for this Moon Rush that he almost fell off the tree, luckily Grahams saved him but that was almost a sure fire way to almost miss the Moon Rush if he got into an accident!

As Grubbi threw his line into the water he looked up at the twinkling stars, and the mantas flowing within the leaves. It was truly a once in a life - time spot to behold and he hoped he would be able to catch at least one Eclipse Prism Fish tonight!

Out of nowhere Grahams and Grubbi jolted to life as soon as they noticed the Moon was at its prime of shimmer meaning an increased chance of catching an Eclipse Prism Fish! All the Snugzi's rapidly casted their lines once more trying to find just the right spot for a rare catch!

Grubbi and Grahams rapidly recast their lines hoping at least for a chance of retrieving the fish. They waited and waited, kicking their feet in anticipation. They noticed a lot of Snugzi's were getting rare fish but not one was getting the eclipse prism. Grubbi was slightly losing hope but there was 5 minutes left of the prime, he can't lose hope now!

Tick tock, tick tock. The clock was ticking by, slow as a snail for each millisecond and second that Grubbi waited and waited. Tick tock, tick tock. 4 minutes left. Would Grubbi ever get the Prism Fish and get a new friend? Tick tock, tick tock. 3 minutes left. Grubbi was practically sweating at this point and even stress stuffing his face with leftover Grahams crackers. Tick tock, tick tock. 2 minutes. Grubbi looked over and noticed Grahams about to pass out from earlier exhaustion so Grubbi shook him awake, and Grahams thanked him, however both were still worried with the amount of time left. Tick tock, tick tock. 1 minute left. Grubbi was wondering if he should recast the line but legend says the fish might never come, it's a sign of disrespect. Grubbi ultimately decided to wait but was sweating his toes off. His blood pressure was probably spiking at this point!

Tick tock, tick tock. 30 seconds. Tick tock, tick tock. 15 seconds. Grubbi was sadly kicking his feet and almost giving up hope, but right as he was giving up a sparkle shimmered in the water and gave an iridescent glow to his eye. He knew this was it! He felt a bite! Grubbi immediately started reeling the line in with haste yet a gentleness and care to it, however this fish wasn't giving up easily. Grahams immediately noticed Grubbi struggling to catch it and helped pull it in. This Prism Fish was giving a whole battle, it was almost 100 kg in weight. Would they catch it?

They both struggled and struggled as the fish was putting up even more of a fight, but Grahams had an idea! Grahams hastily grabbed his last spare Grahams cracker from his pocket and sprung it up into the air.

Grubbi went awestruck into amazement because as soon as the tasty snack was thrown into the air the fish made a big splash!

The fish twirled into the air and opened its big mouth! Grahams and Grubbi knew this was their chance, they both with their powerful Snugzi force reeled the fish onto land giving it enough space to land on the grass! It plopped onto the grass eating the Grahams cracker with a big ol' goofy smile to its amazement of what a Grahams cracker tastes like.

Grahams and Grubbi cheered and could not believe their eyes! They had done it! They caught the one fish that was truly a once in a life - time to behold. He wish everyone could see but since they were so high up it was nearly impossible!

Grubbi then realized to his horror "What if he can't breathe!?!?" Luckily, the fish responded with a massive roar "I can breathe, I have evolved to both on land and air I just choose to be alone in the depths of the tree almost all my life until someone can catch me!" Grubbi sighed in relief and asked if the fish wanted to be friends. The fish was surprised as he expected the person to catch him to make the wish so he'd become one with the stars. The fish would still live of course, but that means the fish evolves into a space - planet fish being that protects the stars.

"I'd love to!" the fish exclaimed. Grubbi and Grahams cheered. Grubbi in the end truly got his wish and the Eclipse Prism Fish would be forever friends with the kind - hearted bug fellow and his happy Grahams cracker friend!