Growing up among the Dalish, Davrin was a restless young man, always on the lookout for adventure. Eldrin was good in that regard, helping direct that restlessness into something productive as he taught Davrin about nature and all the wild animals in it.

But eventually, Davrin’s need for adventure took him outside of the clan. While adventuring was fun, he still felt directionless. It wasn’t until he met the Grey Wardens that he found his purpose—hunting and fighting against the darkest creatures Thedas had to offer to protect the innocent.

Davrin spent years in the field, making a few friends, but mostly on the move, never settling down one place for too long. It wasn’t until he was recalled to Weisshaupt that he found a new place to call home. And while there, he was assigned to a secret mission by the First Warden: protect thirteen fledgling griffons and their trainers.

ABILITIES

With his increased strength and stamina due to the Blight running through his veins, Davrin is stronger and faster than most. His preferred weapons of choice include a sword and shield, though he’s capable of wielding anything with a pointy end.

After some training with Assan, Davrin is slowly becoming the foremost expert in fighting alongside griffons.
