Introduction

The introduction should be clear and provide for the issue to be discussed in the manuscript.[1] Before the objective, authors should provide an adequate background, and very short literature survey in order to record the existing conditions, to show which is the best of previous researches, to show the main limitation of the previous researches, to show what you want to achieve (to solve the limitation), and to show the scientific merit or novelties of the paper.[2]

This part should also include an explanation of the urgency, a clear statement of the study's objectives, and a mention of the research challenge.[3] The manuscript must be written in English (preferably) or Bahasa Indonesia.[4]

METHOD

This method should be written descriptively and include a statement outlining the research methodology, including the type of research, research approach, data source, method of data collecting and analytic method.[5] The author must describe the method for analysing the legal issue.[6] This method, which provides the reader with as much information as possible on the method employed, is optional and should only be included in an original research piece.[7]

RESULT AND DISCUSSION (Main Heading)

This section is the most important section of your article. The analysis or results of the research should clear and concise.[8] The results should summarize (scientific) findings rather than providing data in great detail.[9] Please highlight differences between your results or
