

Shitmemery stands in the lobby of the NYC Center for Aerospace and Applied Mathematics in New York. The Shit List campaign is still growing steam, and now dozens of members in the crowd are wearing "Shit's Getting Real™" t-shirts.

"Good afternoon NYC! So happy to be back here. There are two things I really miss the most about the Northeast and that's the foliage and the coffee! I just had to take a quick foray down the road to stand in the Park and look at the leaves before I came here. The only thing that really turns red down South is the ocean once the red tide comes in, sadly.

"Now, I'm here to talk to you about the congressional race going down right now in New York. The Democratic candidate, /u/imperial_ruler, is clearly not a good fit for this district. In fact, running for House is only a consolation prize for him after losing the Democratic presidential primary in a landslide to /u/Guiltyair, including a lackluster showing of <20% in the Northeastern primary. The voters of this state have clearly rejected him, but here he is anyway! Is that acceptable to you folks?

The crowd boos and shouts "no!"

"That's what I thought. A candidate reviled by the voters, by his party, does not belong in office. So how about I talk about a candidate who has served in this great state before, and who has the full confidence of his Party? That's right, I'm talking about /u/bandic00t_, or as I call him, Astro. I am happy to be up here campaigning with him. Not just because of my love for (and ties to) this state, not just because we share the same party, but because I truly think that he is the best candidate for the job. You don't see the DNC coming here to support him; hell, you don't even see the Democratic Senate candidate or his former opponent, GuiltyAir, stumping for him anywhere."

"Astro, on the other hand, is the current Representative for this district. He has fought hard for this district this past term, and if you place your confidence in him this Election Day I have no doubt that he will continue to do so. Astro is committed to a secure America. Astro is committed to an America that does not stick its nose and its military in every corner of the world. Most importantly, Astro is committed to investing in America's future. More funding for NASA, more funding for space travel, and the increase of American endeavors in space. His opponent says that he 'should be ashamed' for these beliefs. Do you agree with him?"

The crowd shouts 'NO!' even louder.

"That's what I thought! IR is not a good fit for this district. He doesn't believe what you believe, and he certainly doesn't believe what his party believes. Hell, he decried a wall on our southern border, but his very platform called for the 'swift deportation' of all illegals! He is nothing but a hypocrite. I doubt that the good people of New York will allow themselves to be fleeced by this con artist. A vote for Astro, and a vote for the GOP everywhere up and down the ballot, is a vote to continue the policies and the progress that we have pushed for under President Non. Imagine what we'll be able to get done when we don't have a raging obstructionist in the White House? The only way to find out is if you vote GOP on Election Day! ARE YOU WITH ME?"

The crowd bursts into applause as Shit takes two t-shirt cannons and starts firing new Shit List merch into the audience. Many fans leave the venue sporting new 'Shittin' on the Opposition' shirts.
