

Bibliography with Active Citations

This bibliography includes documentation standard to any scholarly book – as well as “active citations” for certain sources. These citations, following the suggestion of Moravcsik (2010), link to online documents footnoted in The Global Right Wing and the Clash of World Politics. Because such materials may not remain on the Internet forever, I have also included permanent online links to my own copies of excerpts from certain documents. As a result, other scholars will be able to examine my sources, probe my interpretations, and challenge my findings – all with the goal of improving replicability, reliability, and knowledge about the issues I discuss in the book.

Producing the bibliography was time-consuming, involving my copying the full documents using Zotero, excerpting portions using Jing, and storing the extracts on Screencast. To make the task manageable, I used two criteria in selecting which sources to make “active.” First, I selected only documents from which I quoted directly. Second, among those, I excerpted primarily activist materials not widely available in research libraries. On that basis, I generally did not include extracts from books, journal articles, media stories, or governmental or United Nations reports. Hard copies of all materials cited in the book are filed and publicly available at Duquesne University’s Gumberg Library Archive.

Because active citations are a new idea – to my knowledge, The Global Right Wing and the Clash of World Politics is the first book to include them – I would be interested in receiving feedback about this bibliography: cliffordbob2@gmail.com
