

Teens Talking Trash

Submitted by Kanyesutra

Welcome to a representative sampling of Gaiaonline. What exactly is Gaiaonline? For those who are unfamiliar, imagine an anime version of Reddit. It was once the largest forum on the internet (supposedly), but has slowly devolved into an even more terribly designed and ad-filled forum for teens to express their opinions on. This forum's like 13 years old and murdered my computer while putting this together. From the main forum page: "Gaia has 2,319,935,556 articles posted with 28,499,275 registered users."

Falling off the Slippery Slope: Furies the New Transgender

Michael Noire (OP):

I've been expecting this for some time. People in the left love the notion of the slippery slope being a fallacy. I argued over the years that it was a theoretical model with accuracy, not fallacy. First it was the gays, then the transgenders, now the furies. At some point, the furry movement will become the mainstream argument topic of elective surgery, cannibalism, bestiality, and so forth. Along the way, someone is going to make  arguments, but child rapists are far off in the future. Today, we see the sunset of the gay movement, the noon of the transgender movement, and the dawn of the furry.

But before any of that becomes mainstream cosmetics, and men run around barking, while tweens beg their parents for neko ears, what we are going to see is the third wave of Social Justice Warriors defending these hybrids. I suppose we can call them people, but at that point, you really can't call them humans anymore.

Are they freaks? Are they monsters? Are they anime fantasies or badly written internet fiction manifest as reality? Are they an aspect of the bondage culture, primitive nature, or just plain stupidity? What are the impacts on human rights, for animals? What happens if one of these things parents a child? Is there a line to be drawn and if so, where do we draw it?

Young men, Be Men

Michael Noire (OP): Super long post ahead, includes “touching plastic turns you gay”, excerpted

To the Young Men,

Welcome to the 21st century. Most of you have little memory of the 20th century, and even less memory of a time where being a man in the 20th century meant what it did for virtually all centuries prior. That is not your fault. Your society is rearing you to be flimsy, weak, effeminate, obsequious yet contrarian, verbally abusive yet politically correct. You have been trained in logos, but pathos and ethos are dead inside you. Your emotions are being amplified by poison flowing through your blood stream, but your better emotions, the passions of a man are alien, unknown to you.

If you believe you can find what it is to be a man by dressing up like a prostitute, you are mistaken. You cannot become a man by dressing in female hormone mimicker plastics. You cannot be a man by drinking tofu variants full of female hormone mimicking plant proteins.

Do you not yet know that the muscle powders that appear to make other boys big and strong are actually full of estrogen mimickers?

Br3akFr33:

You know what, you're right, Mike. Amen to that.  defying gender roles. I'm not wearing a dress and the Illuminati can't make me.

And you know what else? I wish I had the time of mind to be as wordy and elaborate in threads and about the issues as you. I kinda feel burned out on it, but I still have that passion that keeps me going.

 society they can't tell me what to do. They can't trick me and get me to do the opposite of what they're telling me to do either because that's equally stupid. I'm just going to do what I want. I'm not going to go out of my way to be manly, because I already am manly enough, I don't need to go all crazy and do wild-a st. You know what's manly as ? Surviving. Surviving when other people are showing off and slipping up. Survival is hard, Mike. It's hard down here in the gutter.

And you know what? I might just be the manliest guy around if I'm the one that's left standing.

Girls love it when you don't die or go to prison.

Flora Sweet:

If you're on a website where you dress up chibi dolls with big eyes in pixel clothes then your masculinity license is officially withdrawn.

Your definition of masculinity is rather superficial. I consider masculinity to be somebody having a genuine interest in sport rather than worrying over the size of their hips. Your resilience to plastic is not masculine, it's just  stupid. Plastic is a convenient material. Anyway, if men choose to do something feminine, so be it.

Evil is on the rise. Is a war about to rage?

Jahaja Lightworker (OP):

Hello, ED, I am here once again to speak to you of evil portents. A few days ago, Prince Rogers Nelson, known professionally as Prince, was murdered. What is that you say? He was not murdered? I'm sorry, but he was; It was dark forces who control this world who murdered him; the ones that humans call the Illuminati or New World Order. The day of his death coincides with the worship of the ancient deity Baal, as well as the birthday of Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor Mountbatten, known professionally as Queen Elizabeth II of Britain. The House of Windsor is among the forces of the elites who control this world. His death was a sacrifice; for what, I do not know, perhaps for power, for strength for the elites. But that is not all, my sister-brothers. As we speak, wars and conflicts continue to rage in the Middle East, with ISIS and Syria's civil war. Refugees and people claiming to be refugees rush into Europe, causing conflicts with the native people. The gates of Baal are going up all over the world for the sake of "historical preservation". [...]

President Obama may harm the economy, he hates child labor.

Jacque De Molay (OP):

Barrack Obama signed a bill banning goods made by child labor. The American GDP is going to be reduced if this is enforced because a bill that excludes child labor cuts the United States off from most of the world's produced goods and bars us from trade. Isn't capitalism about being free to buy and sell anything? Trade should be voluntary. If the United States doesn't engage in child labor then the free market is done. The costs to American citizens for our goods is only going to rise. President Obama says that his decision was the right thing to do, but what about that child laborer you've now just put out of work? If the child laborer doesn't work then he or she won't have enough to eat. Who are we to be blind pretending not to see their needs? This choice harms family, this choice harms industry, this choice also harms international trade. America can easily recover from this loss if we bring back child labor and raise our GDP exponentially, but what will other countries do? They don't have the luxury that we do to limit trade, they're not producing enough! Yeah, they could accept loans from the Chinese, but how will they pay back any of it if the loan exceeds their GDP?

Xiam:

I was under the impression that child labor was abolished in our country years ago. To support it in other countries would be hypocrisy, wouldn't it?

Jacque De Molay (OP):

Hypocritical, sort of. It shouldn't have been banned in our country at all or any country. Obstructive labor policies like that leave the United States less competitive.

Jacque De Molay (OP):

I'm not your enemy, let's stay friendly. Children aren't property but they are financial investments, that are time intensive, and can cost a high a lot of money by the time they reach maturity. I just don't think it's fair to put yourself into a financial hole as a parent and not gain any revenue from the expenses that come from parenting. It's a good precedent for children to honor the parents by easing their way into retirement, their children can do the same for them too when the children become adults, and forever. It's really the same idea that Confucius had when it comes to honor.

Jacque De Molay (OP):

[...]If governments didn't subsidize the African slave trade, we would've been left with the historical legacy of the indentured servant and that wouldn't have been too shabby for contemporary descendants of slaves, if you ask me. You believe that it's a bad thing for families to work under a corporation. I don't necessarily, the reason I don't is because an impoverished family connotes unstrategic procreation. The poor have poor children, it's an economic given. With that in mind, let's talk the ripple effect. Suppose a poor child doesn't make the mistakes that their parents did. They don't have children out of wedlock. They don't marry young, they labor for themselves, they would effectively be able to save. Breaking the cycle of dependency in one generation and that can happen repeatedly. To me, that's what capitalism is. I find nothing wrong with families working in garment shops, it's a start to an independent future.

The Racist Religion of Political Correctness

Asadachi (OP):

I am a Christian and am extremely politically incorrect...

I have found that this phrase has dumbed the masses and just about pulled everyone apart by saying we all "should" be equal, but really states we are not. If you believe this toxic lie, please stop now. Because you truly believe in a doctrine stating that we are not all equal.

We are not all the same. We are different colors, We are different textures, We are different genders, We are different Strengths, We are different ages, We are different!!! We ARE ALL EQUAL. By creating a system of belief that stifles one's voice over another, we create a system that says otherwise.

Asadachi (OP):

But that is just it... PC just isn't PC. And it has evolved and indoctrinated itself into just about everything. I personally prefer to know people's actual thoughts rather than polite lies.

Say you have a white neo nazi store owner who owns a bakery. Everyday he serves breakfast to thousands. Before all this PC junk got involved you could probably tell who this guy was and what he represented by the stuff he had in his store. PC would ask for him to take his Nazi flag down along with his crazy literature and hide his tattoos. Would you like to eat the food made by a complete wack job and know your money was probably going to support his ideals? NO!!! You would avoid that place at all cost and his business would most likely suffer as people came to the same conclusion.

Homosexual christian? No Such thing

if i was gay, i would hate God and the Bible. otherwise i would crack up and shoot myself. srsly.

i actually thought about being gay in college years. went to a few GLU "gay lesbian union" dances that the campus hosted.

and while i dug their techno music, dances and drugs... that life style just wasn't for me. it seemed so shallow to me.

i made a choice to do what i did. it wasn't something i felt i was born to be and couldn't help but be that way. being straight is a choice too. one thing i don't really understand is why gays have such a problem saying its a choice. why do they want to come off as innocent of it all and say "i didnt choose this"

if i was gonna be gay, i'd say i chose to be this way.
im not gay and i choose not to be gay. i choose to be straight.

the more i think about this i'm convinced that there can totally be such thing as a Christian f.

SARLO:

just like there can be a Christian who cusses, a Christian who lies, a Christian who has anger issues, a Christian that looks on another with lust. Christians will never be sinless or perfect in this life, we'll always have some level of sin that we're guilty of and should be asking forgiveness of and repenting of on a daily basis. But sometimes we don't do that. Sometimes Christians go for several days, months, years, in disobedience. the fact of the matter is... if i go sex up the neighbor lady, that means i just engaged in homosex and i'm a Christian. that makes me a Christian homosexual; at least for the day or moment or whatever.

hey, but something caught me as funny in this thread.. someone mentioned "thousands of homosexual animals" haaaa! dude that cracked me up.

animals also eat their young and nudge them from their nest if they sense they're sick in order to insure the survival of the family.

animals rape, commit incest and cannibalize one another too. animals eat excrement. the gay animal phenomena has, imo, been debunked for me personally. not claiming that this is absolute fact that anyone else must accept as their own view, only this is enough to convince me as i believe they're experts and i take their word for it. How do I begin my Wiccan journey??

FailxMonster (OP):

20 years old, and I've always had an interest in Wiccan/Pagan practices. I just have no idea how to go about it. I know my town has a coven, maybe two. But I'm so nervous, I can't ask anyone about it. I just don't know where to start.

Fermionic:

Alcohol.

anonymous attributes:

There is no journey in wicca. The only saying or scripture they have is this "If it harm non, do as ye will."

I have a question for you, if you believe it is a journey, then you must take it seriously, something that you learn through your life and continually experience in, right? if the only commandment or suggestion or scripture they have is "If it harm non, do as ye will."

Who defines what harms another?

What is the perimeters on that?

Does the scripture include wisdom and teaching as to what these things are? it does not.

If there are a multitude of witches from all walks of life, races, places and beliefs, then what does the scripture mean to every single individual "If it harm non, do as ye will."? If everyone has their own opinion on morality, how does the wiccan scripture help anyone?

Non of my questions are rhetorical, I mean every single one of them. I look forward to your reply.

Sir Fuggery:

By not becoming Wiccan

Its a sham religion made up by some dude named Eric Gardner back in the 50s. Its a hotchpotch of different European Native faiths, sometimes mixing ideas that are incompatible, and including ideas that are alien to ancient European thinking.

If you truly want to be a Pagan, research your ancestors and where they came from and the religions of those people before they were converted to Christianity. If that doesnt appeal to you, stay atheist, please

Does the US military use fake Jear John letters for training \(Isfahan please? If reading\)

MistressOfTheShadows (OP):

My fiance just left for Navy boot-camp on the 20th of last month, and he wrote me a letter and I wrote him one back, nothing was wrong, but then some old guys I knew who used to be in the military told me something shocking that I've been loosing sleep over... They said that in the military, back when they were in there (one was Navy and the other was Airforce) they would try to break their spirit and test how strong they were emotionally by giving them fake "Dear John letters" to trick them into thinking that their significant other broke up with them! Does the military still do such a cruel thing?

I'm worried about it because my fiance has always been a really sensitive guy with low self-esteem and he has a past history of suicide attempts, and his sole reason for joining the Navy was to have a means support me so we could get married, and our relationship has been under a lot of strain because our families haven't been getting along and the pastor of his church didn't want us to be together because I "wasn't godly enough" and I worry that he might think that I wrote the letter for real because the emotional strain finally got to be too much... and that he might throw himself overboard and try to drown himself if he thought I broke up with him.

I haven't talked to anyone who's been in the military recently enough to know, but someone said that they don't think they still do that anymore because they are more concerned about mental health these days and more concerned with legal issues. Does anyone know if they still fake letters like that?

Why does everyone seem so sheep-like and inorganic nowadays?

L0up (OP):

American culture is built on trends. That's something I've always known but have come to realize even more recently, because of the highly saturated, trend following culture of the internet. I'm constantly being exposed to people who engage in behavior because it's trendy..

Someone recently made a post talking about their dislike for the term "daddy" and it reminded me of how sheep-like and fake so many people seem to me today. I've been on the internet for a long time and I don't remember it ever being this extreme when it comes to trendsetting.

So, my question is: are there any people left in the world who don't say things that they've seen on Tumblr, don't use excessive trendy buzzwords and trendy memes, and don't care for what's happening in the mainstream media? People who are actually themselves, not products of mass media indoctrination? I can't help but feel like this trend following culture is a reflection of the concept that so many people in society as a whole cannot think for themselves or do not truly know who they are, so they cling onto whatever popular identities, behaviors, vernacular, styles, etc. passes them by.

Is no one else tired of this?

Cageless:

Children grow up between four walls and consider sunlight their enemy. They do not learn how to think. They are raised by parents under a culture that alienates children. They are not given time to be outside -- alone, and with others (and without expectation). Language is deemed a choir as opposed to a critical and enjoyable tool used from humor and to express their individual opinion, not just to agree, disagree, read instructions, and simplify into categories or Top-Ten's.

I remember when classmates began to quote memes. At first I gave them a look as if to ask "you're only trying to pull off an ironic satire, right?" and it seemed to be so. But then the quotes got so frequent and were followed by no expectation for amusement that I finally had to realize the dividing line. I was seen as simple-minded for not withholding my disinterest in their clever remarks. If you see it necessary to charm me with minuscule acts of memorization that feign, at best, a limited competence, then make note that I want no part in this deficient drone-esq. dialogue.

The title of this thread essentially encompasses the very basis from which I wish to begin every venture of discussion that I come across on Gaia, just to communicate that my remarks are not intended to be personal, but keep in mind that we are bound to disagree, and that is okay. Just please, let us talk like we are human.

What do you think of otherkin?

Brotato Chipss (OP):

I think that st's weird af tbh. If you don't know what otherkin is it's like where people think that they're like different animals or things but they're trapped in other people's bodies. I'm pretty open-minded but I'm pretty  sure this is an actual mental illness. Like there are kids who say their dragons and have to eat gems so they eat their parents wedding rings, or they beat other animals to show dominance. Like what the *****?

tl;dr: Tumblr is at it again.

Wraith of Azrael:

It's an alternative religious belief.

It's predominately based around the concepts of reincarnation and that the idea that other creatures have souls as well as particular semi religious experiences (think past life regression) and such.

Are there some people who "go over the line" and tend to do the whole acting like a wolf, dragon, etc? Yea and those people we would probably call mentally ill but there are plenty of people who aren't, I know some who aren't nuts.

Just as there are some people who believe in God but not everyone believes that the magic sky daddy is talking to them directly and wants to act out certain things.

Nor would we start going around classifying everyone who believes in reincarnation as being mentally ill either.

Zombi24: (Super fucking long post)

I find this very interesting phenomena that is highly unusual and strange only because the nature to understanding it is so complexed in each individual. Identity crisis?

I have to be honest I see myself as a "otherkin" and my brother is also a "otherkin" only we differ greatly upon intellect.

As a Gnostic I strive to understand the mysteries of this world, the psychology, the spirituality, the progression and development of humanity, the understanding of how the Universe operates and even the study of Religion. I am motivated to understand all that I can. Does this make me intelligent? Yes and no.

My brother is more simplistic that focuses on having a child-like mentality that dresses up as a otter and goes to furry conventions.

Think about it. Without jobs, people have no income. So Americans get income from somewhere else. There are no jobs, because Mexicans have them all.

Are most Americans just on welfare? My brother married a woman from Ohio, and she is on welfare. A woman across the street is on welfare. In stores, I often see people paying for items using welfare.

Are most Americans just on welfare? It's not just Americans I see on welfare, but Mexicans too. Are most Americans just on welfare?

pastel-candy- lover 93

Pastel-candy-lover93 (OP):

I don't mind the smell of garlic. But if it's gone to my body. My body rejects it. So I'm not a vampire. I'm a human just like you. Perhaps a female. I have very pale skin a oval shape face, dark brown eyes, dark brown thick wavy hair and thick black arched eyebrows, large jaw and small teeth, like Dracula. But female version of him. But I'm not a vampire.

Eating cotton balls.

So, I was having a discussion about eating cotton balls today. I know, totally gross and cringy, like the thought of the texture against your teeth makes me shudder. So, one of the issues is bowel blockage, even with lubrication such as submersing the ball in orange juice. However, theoretically, if you were to tear the ball into smaller pieces and then dip those into orange juice, there would be no bowel issues because of how small the pieces would be, right?

I'm totally not trying to help anyone do this by the way, I'm just really curious, because like people have died from this. Could their deaths have been avoided by simply tearing up smaller pieces?

P.S Picking the fluffy pieces from your bum does not sound fun.

Mainly I'd like to keep the facial fat and sort of convert (idk) the rest into muscle. I'm not interested in becoming super skinny (just bones and skin etc) or whatever.

So HOW do I keep my face full but my body fit?

Also my breasts are not too big but still slightly uncomfortable - I used to swim a lot before and that would make them smaller, problem was it would also  up my body shape (I have a head that's on the smaller side so when my shoulders get too big... I just look ridiculous).

Maddy-Mazey:

You could have autism or something similar, or perhaps anxiety and you are worrying way too much about all this!

but either way

Nobody grows up overnight and doesn't ever "feel" certain things again or stop obsessing over shows or things or what have you being ("normal" /adult just changes how open people are about their passions and opinions, ect. learning how to carry yourself in front of all kinds of people and in diff situations

nowadays people are more accepting than they have ever been in the past of awkward individuals, and people who have personality flaws that glare in everyone's faces besides the afflicted

Many 70-yr olds claims they still "feel" 40 or below, because the human brain doesn't age according to some number on a calender, it ages with experiences, and knowledge

However she isn't telling me exactly what is going on, what is tying her down other than she can't come stay with me immediately. However she made a post on social media saying: I wonder what the guy I want to Marry is thinking about right now?

Western values being flushed down the drain

Mera1506 (OP):

The Western culture that we have inherited became great because of its values and traditions and how it held onto them. Though not all of them great, most of these values are being flushed down the drain at an ever faster pace in the name of progress.

In order for any culture to survive enough healthy children have to reach adulthood to replace the previous generation and be proud of their culture to pass its values onto their children.

However feminism began stigmatizing motherhood and pushing women into the work force, saying that having kids at a young age means you have no ambition. Saying that you have to do whatever a man can do and forgetting that a healthy next generation is required. More and more women are either not having children or not having enough children to replace the previous generation and also having them outside of their physical prime. This increases the chances of a child being born for instance with down syndrome exponentially the older a woman becomes, same with other birth defects. The older a woman gets the more dangerous a pregnancy will be also.

The effects are especially visible in Europe where birthrates quickly dropped below replacement rates leaving the economy unable to cope to pay for the older people's pensions without having enough young skilled people in the work force. The economic migrants (and up to 70% are not refugees, but migrants) often are illiterate in their own language, let alone learning a new language and getting a job. They have no job perspectives whatsoever and are draining the welfare state Europe has, bringing the Euro ever closer to collapsing.

Fahkeng Rieturd:

Women have forgotten their place, as have men. There haven't been enough blood orgies in the past few centuries, if the men aren't soaking in the blood of their enemies with women at his side, and if women are trying to hold down some st desk job instead of making dinner and soaking their feet then everyone has flipped bass backwards.

All you people working w/ toys and numbers when Brodin commands us to let loose the hounds of war. Madness!

Also,  the workforce.

BlackRose_GreenBud:

What if I find children fugly, disgusting st makers who are good for nothing but screaming, shitting, puking, and torturing their parents? What if I react not with concern, but with white hot rage when I hear a baby squalling? What if I would rather shake the child to shut its  puke hole instead of actually care for it like a reasonable person would?

Trust me, I'd be a shitty, abusive mother. I have no business giving birth to a ct nugget. Not my gig. What do you do with folks like me who can't stand children? Who pose a danger to a child I birth? I'm perfectly fine around adults, and children if I can leave them after a few hours. Not a single spot on my record. I'm not a danger to others, so hospitalization or incarceration is not really a logical thought.

Mera1506 \(OP\): (I'm not leaving much out, this really is out of the blue)

Again we seem to be able to recognize that by breeding dogs a specific way we can create a breed with certain traits, but fail to see that subspecies within the human race which evolved separately for thousands of years have differences? Why would the differences stop wit humans? We too are mammals. Im not saying people who are not white are not human, I am saying that people of different races and backgrounds have different and at times just incompatible values. Islam is not compatible with the west. If you think it is I dare you to walk through an islamic no go zone and see if you get through.

And then there is white privilege, it doesn't exist, but now white people have to apologize for being white.... Sorry, but no.

The Daddy Dom Lifestyle (Excerpts from 200 pages)

Lorelei Dreaming

anyway, I tried being little all day today. I made him take me out because I felt really lonely and didn't like being cooped up in the apartment. We went to Putt-Putt and got lots and lots of tickets, and we ate sushi and he bought me a cute coloring book and some cool twisty crayons per my request he said I was being really cute today, so I'll take that as a good sign ; u;

I want to know if there's any sort of essay or something out there online that I can show him about the DD/lg lifestyle that would make it less awkward for me to explain? I feel like just showing him a gaia thread doesn't really cut it

I feel like I know the basics of how I want to explain it, but I need some kind of documentation that this is a . . . relatively normal? thing. Like that it's not bad. I don't know how vanilla he is, but I definitely don't want to scare him. I've been trying to be bolder lately and tell him what I want but it's really hard! I want to tell him that I don't want it to be like incest, because reading through a lot of the thread, I can tell that (at least for a lot of the people here) it's not ALL about the sexy times. Between the two of us, I'm usually the more adult-like one. I've always been the one with my feet on the ground, because he's always so up in the clouds. But because of my depression taking a heavy toll on me lately, it's hard to be the grown up. I just want to be little and ease my fears about things that don't really even matter! I'm sure it makes sense to some of you, but I'm having a hard time explaining what I'm feeling.

Reeperbahn

Moving back to other things, I'm sitting here drinking horchata out of one of my old sippy cups I dug out from my Attempt #1 at Ageplay, and I'm playing BioShock for like the billionth time and thinking "I know the Big Daddies are basically smelly organ piles in diving suits and the little sisters are begin controlled by parasitic slugs, but WHAT A CUTE SITUATION" And I mean, Ive always thought it was an awfully precious setup, but with my newly (re)discovered interest in CGL I'm just kinda laughing at myself because it's one of those things that, in retrospect, is basically what I want this dynamic to be like like heck yeah, strong protector guy who watches out for me while I walk around in a daze acting like a total weirdo. Basically me and bf, if he were actually dommish.

So it just made me wanna ask, do any of you guys have weird fictional relationships you particularly like that ended up influencing your ageplay dynamic (as another example, I'm also reminded of my fondness for characters like Sunny Baudelaire and her older siblings, or even Dot from Animaniacs, both of whom I totally wanted to be when I was a kid). Please tell me I'm not the only one so my Big and I got into our first fight today, after being together for nearly two years. It was really painful. We're all good now but. . . when I initially told him to stop I called him "Dad"?? And in public too. . . I really can't figure out why I called him that, and it's weirding me out a little. I mean I do call him Daddy (but the way I say it sounds almost like "Nai"), so to straight up shout "DAD!" as if it were his name. . . does anyone have any clue as to why??

Why do people purposely confuse you?

Just wanted to ask your opinion on this. I have a very good talent when it comes to the visual arts and technology. Likewise, I'm very lacking in other areas of life. The basic things I really can't do. I have an average IQ and have been successful in all areas of my life that I invest my time in such as sports and technology and creative such.

I tend to run into a group of people who somehow manages to team up together and just pretend that I'm completely stupid. Or make me feel that I'm completely unaware or just unknowledgeable about things. They always seem to try to lower my confidence down and pretend that my talent or skill is nonexistent.

For example, I talk to a woman named Jane. Jane and I are completely fine. We understand each other completely well. None of our conversations become confusing. Down the road either Jane feels that I'm boring, annoying, or that I have a flaw or just wants to be entertained or just any reason. She suddenly taps into her inner bully self and she and a group of her friends would then pretend that everything coming out of my mouth is not understandable. As in, they really say things like "Huh?" and "what are you talking about?" and then it would fuel me to be stressed out in some way to cause me to look like a fool.

I know very well that I'm not a fool, I've had great conversations with intelligent people. It just so happens that these group of people are acting solely like this within their group.

I keep running into something what's called "gaslighting trickers" and I'm always stuck in their web. For example, I would be called and enter a phone conversation and have to explain myself as to why I didn't attend work. I simply said something that I already sent in my two weeks and I'm no longer associated with that company. I would be purposely stressed out by them and they would seem to enjoy that happening and even asking other stressing questions.

~Black Petals~:

Wow, when I read this I could completely relate, as it would appear these types of situations take on many similar forms and scenarios.

I recently discovered some mind-shattering realities and truths about someone who is actually quite well-known. Their reputation would flush down my own evidence and anecdotal experiences.

I am still trying to handle this fact myself.

It sounds like those people you had mentioned, including Jane, are rather toxic, suffer from low self esteem or don't know how to empathize well enough in certain social situations to do what is right as opposed to feeding their ego.

Correct me if I am wrong in interpreting the situation.

I am sorry to hear that you had to experience this sort of negativity... I hope you are able to recover and be the better person in future situations. Bless your kind and generous heart; Never give up.

Has anyone wondered about selling photos of themselves?

LEAH LOLAGE (OP):

So I got a ask on tumblr the other day, from someone offering to buy pictures of my feet. I have since accepted but now just waiting for my paypal to work so I can do what I need to do.

But I was just wondering has anyone on here done that kind of thing? And do you have any advice for me. I'm also thinking about selling some used clothes, but a bit more secretly.

Canterellare:

Nope. Never sold any pictures of myself. People usually request the opposite, which I am happy to deliver.

However, it is interesting you are able to make profit from pictures of your feet. Then again, people can be into all sorts of crazy things.

tell me about your past life / your world theories

Cactusing (OP):

i really wanna listen! u v u discouraging thoughts:

I think that in a past life I was probably killed with something struck to the back of the knee because there's that belief that birthmarks are where you died in a past life, and that knee is my bad knee so... yea.

Vardoger:

I believe that soul is matter and cannot be created nor destroyed. I believe that everything has a soul: grass, trees, rocks, bugs, animals, etc. I believe that, normally, when something dies, their soul goes to what basically amounts to a huge recycling plant where they get crushed, mixed up, and reassembled into different souls. Because to me, souls aren't a single, individualistic thing. They are a piece of something. So a tree, for example, would have less of a soul than a human.

Since all these things take a different amount of 'soul', it makes sense then that stuff gets mixed up. So normally, the you of today will have a soul that seems original and uniquely you, and maybe it is simply because of how it was made, but it is actually a conglomeration of small pieces of previously used souls. Usually, the pieces are all small enough that it doesn't affect you. But sometimes, randomly, you may have one 'soul piece' that is much bigger, and so influences you somehow. So, oversimplifying, you might have 50% tiger and 50% old white guy, yet you're a black lady. The 'soul' retains impressions from the past, so now you may think you're a tiger therian or your past life was a white dude. You'd technically be correct on both fronts. But much more commonly, you would have <1% of soul from millions of different things, so while the pieces may or may not contain attributes that carried over to the you of today, they probably won't affect you and you probably won't care about them. (It also makes recalling past lives exceptionally difficult and confusing) [...]

Haru Mutou:

Heaven and Hell are extra-dimensional planes of existence that overlap with our own. Mythical creatures exist. God exists. Lesser gods exist. Angels, demons, aliens. All real. How we perceive time is incorrect. History is happening all at once around us (not in a linear fashion). When we die, we are reborn as different versions of ourselves in a different universe (with slight to high variance compared to this one). Ghosts aren't the person's spirit/soul left behind, they are just an imprint of that person at their time of death.

We don't HAVE souls. We ARE souls. Consciousness defines the nature of one's being. Thus, consciousness is being.

Humans would kill Jesus if he existed

All_The_Worlds_a_Stage (OP):

Since circumcision exists, all the guilty are chosen to be circumcised. All humanity cares about is justice, they don't know anything else.

Jesus would be circumcised too because he beat his executioner. Which is a crime. They don't  care.

End of story.

All_The_Worlds_a_Stage (OP):

No. They'd circumcise him and he'd hemorrhage.

I think something I have to include in the manifesto is that people no longer really believe in a soul because some people's are taken. So they now believe you must be a "good" person to have one, thus its not like the old concept. But the downside of this is that they don't believe the soul is connected to the brain either, because the old concept of an unconditional soul is gone so they can't imagine the condemned people just suffered a honed kind of brain assault and that's why they don't get second chances. Instead they assume they were just bad people, and lost their souls because they were bad, not due to any detectable organic condition.

Why is this bad? Well, because it makes people hate the mentally ill. They are weak and normal people become paranoid that they're bad people and that sometimes causes a self-fulfilling prophecy that gets them thrown in the pillar.

Another aspect of this is that most humans, unless specifically educated on the subject, will sense psionically that a person's soul has been killed, and they tend to broadcast back and deal with them in a manner that completely ignores the cause of it. Humans care about the present. They want to be the ones digging up the past to justify better treatment in the future. They do not like losers doing it. This is why medicated/imprisoned people rarely do well via psionic channels. Their past is eclipsed, and people force them to use what's left of their will to power against them, because collectively humans will take as much as they think they're allowed to, which means restricting what's proper about digging up the past when one has suffered what is perceived to be death of the soul by bad character.

I'll elaborate on that in the manifesto. If I get around to it.

i should just eat that st who tf does that?

what are you gonna do today?
me, i'm gonna plaay doom and doom 2 all day maybe and get a drinky poo in me

Al Oxa:

nah fam you can't claim a whole pizza unless two very specific circumstances:

1. you're one of those wretched african children and it's the first time you've had a pizza
2. you just smoked so much weed you began eating the box that's containing the pizza

Truthfully seeking real advice. premature ejaculation.

Drababon (OP):

I need to know how to deal with and make this issue go away. My girlfriend and I used to be heavily addicted to heroin, which would entirely disable me from being able to get off which actually made me, AND her want to have sex all the time. However, now that we are both clean, I am gods joke of a sexual being and my girlfriend and I have not had sex in probably about 2 years, and that is seriously real. Not since we've had our daughter.

So, guys, I need to know your experiences in life that you recall made it difficult for you to get off, what was not to do with alcohol or illicit drugs.

Drababon (OP):

No no. Distractions do absolutely nothing. I need something that will physically chemically make it harder for me to ejaculate.

...I mean its a shock I didn't spew just from your response on my topic.

Suic1deGirlye:

boyfriend says fix to premature ejaculation is spank it before hand what do you order typically? (mixed drinks, not straight or beer or w/e) i stick to dirty martinis, bloody marys, and this kind of tea we have here that's brewed like beer? idk how it's made but it's wonderful and i like local things if i'm somewhere i don't know i order whiskey sours or rum n cokes bc they're impossible to  up discuss

-that

-how i want to go out this weekend but assholes w/ their ae cars are in town for cruiser weekend and taking up all of the bars

-for real i had to wait in line to get into a bar last night

-i live here i should have priority also discuss if i should make this my new sigpic

i want it to have rounded edges but pb doesn't have that anymore

A Kitchen Sink:

1 shot of the cheapest silver tequila and a beer.

After the round 1, i stick to beers. I like IPAs #1, Craft beers of all sorts, or else a bud-piss-light/coors-piss-light.

Also your sigpic is cute gj pil
