European University Alliances vs. Traditional Networks: Opportunities for American Partners

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

European universities thrive on decades of multilateral cooperation, with vast networks connecting institutions continent-wide. Eight years ago, the European Commission launched European University Alliances—a bold, funded initiative redefining collaboration. This session contrasts these innovative alliances with traditional networks, revealing how American universities can leverage both for strategic partnerships and global impact.

Advancing Faculty Global Engagement Through Data, Strategies, and Administrative Leadership

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

Faculty members are essential for advancing global engagement through research, study abroad programs, curricular development, and international partnerships. In this panel, an administrator focused on faculty engagement, a researcher from a national international education association, and a former SIO and current faculty member will explore effective practices for enhancing administrative leadership and faculty success. They will present a strategy that integrates data analysis, faculty development, and administrative innovation to improve global engagement initiatives.

Five Pitfalls in LATAM: a Leadership Framework for Enrollment Strategy

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

South America was the only region where U.S. visa refusal rates declined in 2025, and Colombia, Peru, and Brazil reached record or near record U.S. enrollment totals. Despite these favorable conditions, most institutions remain unprepared to capture them. This session names the five recurring pitfalls undermining LATAM enrollment strategy, agent misalignment, funding gaps, cycle underestimation, activity-versus-enrollment confusion, and market generalization, then offers leaders a practical framework and self-assessment tool for repositioning strategy toward sustainable growth.

Session Type: Panel Session

Government-Driven Workforce Partnerships in Global Education

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

Governments design cross-border education programs to meet workforce priorities, reshaping internationalization strategy. This panel examines how government-driven talent pipelines operate, institutions evaluate them, and what leadership decisions determine success. Presenters draw on case studies from Sub-Saharan Africa and beyond, illustrating partnership formation, admissions alignment, and shared delivery structures. Participants will engage in guided dialogue on institutional readiness, risk management, and enrollment diversification. Leaders gain practical frameworks for evaluating government partnerships and tools to shape strategy.

Session Type: Panel Session

Cultivating Global Leaders in International Education: Strategies for Innovation That Inspires

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

How do leaders in global education nurture the next generation while navigating complex, rapidly changing environments? This panel explores strategies for fostering leadership through innovation, featuring diverse perspectives. Presenters will discuss their strategies as catalysts for leadership development, shaping tomorrow's leaders of global education as leaders themselves innovating in changing landscapes. Attendees will gain actionable insights on mentoring, strategic partnerships, innovative programs, and leveraging global networks to empower future leaders within the international education community.

Session Type: Panel Session

Helen Gaudette | Jessica Robin | Keiko Ikeda | Hannah Macleod

Charting the Course for Late Career Legacy and Impact

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

For seasoned leaders, true impact extends beyond individual accomplishments and lies in how we empower the future of our field. After experience and position have been established, what do we want the later stages of our careers to look like? This session explores ways for established leaders to create additional value – from legacy goals and the ‘last act’ to succession planning and supporting the next generation of international education leaders.

India Beyond Recruitment: Rethinking University Engagement in a New Era

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

India is reshaping the future of international higher education. As demographic growth, National Education Policy 2020, and expanding research and innovation transform the sector, universities must move beyond viewing India primarily as a student recruitment market. Through perspectives from India, the United States, and Germany, this session explores emerging models for strategic engagement, including research collaboration, transnational education, industry partnerships, and institutional presence, offering practical approaches for building long-term, mutually beneficial partnerships.

From the End of Duration of Status to What's Next: a Regulatory Roundtable for SIOs

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

The end of Duration of Status (D/S) regulation underscored the strategic role of Senior International Officers in navigating an evolving regulatory landscape. This facilitated thought leadership roundtable invites SIOs and other senior leaders to share how their institutions responded to D/S, discuss leadership lessons, and explore strategies for future policy changes. Through peer exchange, participants will examine approaches to executive communication, advocacy, institutional resilience, and strategic planning while advancing internationalization amid continued regulatory uncertainty.

Session Type: Roundtable Discussion

From Silos to Strategy: Internationalizing Health Professions Education

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

Students in the health professions often face barriers to participation in traditional global learning models, while health sciences units and international offices frequently operate in parallel rather than partnership. This session explores how institutions can collaboratively advance the internationalization of health professions education through ethical, career-aligned, and globally engaged learning opportunities. Drawing on institutional and programmatic examples, presenters will examine strategies for breaking down silos, managing risk, and expanding access to meaningful international experiences.

Session Type: Panel Session

Kyle Rausch | Matthew Drexler

Embedding Indigenous Approaches Across an Institution and Intercultural Programming

9:10 AM - 10:00 AM

In this session participants will discover how Indigenous perspectives, values and approaches are being integrated into institutional operations. Through examples of this work across the globe, participants will consider how embodied approaches can strengthen inclusion and belonging, curriculum development, program design and intercultural capability building. The session will provide opportunities for reflection and discussion, supporting participants to apply these insights within their own teaching, learning, and professional contexts.

Irreplaceably Human: Global Learning as the Crucible for the Skills That Matter Most in the AI Age

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

In the Age of AI, content specific skills are losing importance and human-centered skills are becoming more valued. SIOs are sitting on a goldmine of opportunities to help students develop these skills, but may not be at the curriculum redesign table nor marketing these effectively to students. Participants in this round table discussion will take away advocacy, assessment, and awareness building strategies to advance global learning as key to their institutions' human-centered skills agenda.

From Competition to Collaboration: Building Mutually Beneficial Institutional Support

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

While international education has always operated in the context of competition, complementarity, and dedication to shared academic values, it has never been more important for the sector to cooperate as a whole in our changing landscape. Speakers will share examples of how they are promoting and sharing resources in global learning programs, international recruitment, fostering collaboration across institution types, and how institutions and individuals can challenge themselves to support the whole sector.

Alumni Voices: Leadership Development and Fulbright International Education Administrator Seminars

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

Fulbright International Education Administrator (IEA) seminars immerse U.S. higher education professionals in fast-growing international education systems. This panel features alumni of IEA seminars in Germany, India, and France/Senegal, alongside Fulbright staff, discussing how participation strengthens leadership, expands global networks, builds institutional partnerships, and drives innovation. Attendees will gain practical guidance and reference materials on applying, identifying strong candidates, communicating institutional benefits, and leveraging IEA participation to advance professional development and global engagement goals.

Global Health Immersion Programs in India: a Discussion on Two Different Approaches

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

The session explores how global immersion programs in India can advance internationalization of medical education through innovative partnership models. Drawing on the unique collaboration between Ohio University–JSS Academy of Higher Education and Research and other global immersion programs, participants will discuss strategies for cultivating cultural competence, reciprocal institutional partnerships, and transformative student learning. Through guided peer dialogue, attendees will exchange best practices and leave with practical approaches for sustainable, globally engaged health professions education.

Justifying Your Paycheck: Demonstrating Strategic Value of International Offices Beyond Mobility

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

As higher education institutions face declining mobility, funding pressures, and accountability demands, international offices must answer: What value do you bring beyond mobility programs? This session explores emerging approaches to how international partnership professionals are redefining their role as strategic institutional assets by connecting government, industry, research, and academic stakeholders. Through evolving case studies and practical frameworks, presenters will examine how international offices create measurable value and advance institutional priorities.

Building International Partnerships Across Higher Education Systems: Lessons from Saudi Arabia

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

As institutions expand transnational education (TNE) and international partnerships, leaders increasingly face the challenge of navigating differences between higher education systems. Using Saudi Arabia's rapidly evolving higher education landscape under Vision 2030 as a case study, this interactive panel provides practical guidance on policy, governance, academic structures, and quality assurance frameworks. Participants will gain strategic insights for evaluating partnership opportunities, anticipating cross-system considerations, and developing sustainable institutional collaborations across diverse higher education contexts.

Future Ready Together: Breaking Down Institutional Silos Through Integrated Global Engagement

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

International education offices frequently operate in isolation from corporate engagement, research, and career units, resulting in fragmented data and missed global opportunities. This panel introduces the Integrated Global Engagement Maturity Model (IGEMM)—a 4-stage diagnostic framework for building cross-campus coalitions. Presenters share strategic organizational models and change-management practices for leveraging shared data and ethical AI tools to transform siloed institutional relationships into unified, enterprise-wide global engagement strategies.

Session Type: Panel Session

Leadership Lessons from TNE Models at Three Public Universities

11:55 AM - 12:45 PM

Transnational education (TNE) evolves as higher education institutions seek innovative ways to expand global engagement, strengthen international partnerships, enhance student success, and address current enrollment and mobility challenges. Different institutions and contexts require individualized approaches to TNE, partnership and program development, academic oversight, and resource allocation. Drawing on firsthand experience, presenters and attendees will examine lessons learned from three distinct TNE models: Dual Enrollment; Dual Degree; and Fast Tracks: 4+1 and Online Pathway Models.

Fireside Chat: One Health Global Alliance - Narrowing the Gap in Global Health Impact

1:30 PM - 2:00 PM

Most emerging diseases arise at the intersection of human, animal, and environmental systems, yet global capacity to prevent and respond remains uneven. Significant disparities in workforce development, institutional capacity and equitable knowledge exchange persist between the Global North and Global South. This panel explores innovative and sustainable approaches to bridging these gaps through collaborative networks and educational partnerships that connect global expertise with local priorities to strengthen resilient health systems.

The Culture We Choose: Stewardship, Trust, and Strategic Partnerships

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

As international education evolves, senior leaders face increasingly complex decisions about partnerships, organizational change, and institutional strategy. Yet the most important questions often extend beyond financial models, to issues of mission, governance, transparency, and trust. Through a facilitated discussion grounded in real institutional scenarios, participants will explore practical frameworks for evaluating partnerships, strengthening institutional stewardship, and ensuring that organizational decisions remain centered on students and long-term educational values.

AI and the Future of Global Higher Education: AI-Driven Rankings and Institutional Innovation

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

University rankings have become the dominant tool for comparing institutions, yet they often oversimplify institutional quality and provide limited guidance for students seeking their best educational fit. This panel critiques the limitations of rankings and introduces an AI–driven alternative based on clustering and classification algorithms that generates institutional ratings rather than ordinal rankings. Panelists will examine the implications of this paradigm shift for institutional strategy, international student mobility, and more informed decision-making across higher education.

Global HR for SIOs - Winning Stakeholder Support for Overseas Work Arrangements

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

Internationalization requires people—including faculty, staff, and contractors—working overseas, sometimes for long periods. Successful overseas staffing must overcome obstacles posed by host-country laws and risk-averse business offices. This session will explore the challenges created by different kinds of global work and identify actionable solutions. It will also walk through a business process for evaluating requests and matching them to appropriate work arrangements, gaining broad stakeholder buy-in along the way.

Session Type: Panel Session

Joseph Levy | Daniel Kampsen

Beyond Borders: Building Health Career Competencies

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

As demand for globally minded health professionals grows, study abroad is becoming an increasingly valuable component of health sciences education. This panel will examine the connection between career readiness and cultural learning, while demonstrating how study abroad equips future health professionals with the empathy, adaptability, and intercultural skills needed to thrive in an increasingly interconnected healthcare landscape.

Session Type: Panel Session

From Advocate to Strategist: Leading Global Education Through an Era of Accountability

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

International education has long championed its impact on student success, but too often we've led with the intangible benefits, which no longer satisfy campus leadership, policymakers, and families demanding proof of impact. This panel examines the leadership shift underway: how IE leaders are building the infrastructure, cross-campus partnerships, and institutional narratives that embed global learning into retention and career-readiness metrics — and how they're navigating resistance and resource constraints to do it.

Session Type: Panel Session

Andrew Gordon | Kara Godwin | Chad Hoseth

Strategy Before Opportunity: Why Successful TNE Starts Before Market Selection

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

This panel will argue that successful TNE begins long before an institution selects a market, identifies a partner or chooses a delivery model. Too often, universities allow attractive opportunities to shape institutional strategy, rather than allowing strategy to determine which opportunities are worth pursuing. This session will explore how strategic intent, governance, organizational capability, and risk appetite underpin better strategic decision-making that leads to more resilient and sustainable TNE.

Session Type: Panel Session

Professional Development: a Strategic Priority for IE Leaders and Their Teams

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

Successful outcomes stem from aligning professional capacities with internationalization goals. Whether adapting to institutional priorities, global affairs, student needs, or new responsibilities, professional development is vital for international educators. Drawing on AIEA member data and emerging research, we consider strategic alignments between professional development participation and internationalization goals. Participants will explore how this data can be used to inform decisions about learning opportunities, priorities, and resources - for IE leaders and their teams.

International Partnership Lessons for TNE

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

TNE straddles long-standing aspects of international education, each with a body of knowledge, practice, and lessons learned the hard way. This roundtable concerns TNE's intersection with international partnerships, inviting participants to identify partnership wisdom relevant to the fast-moving development of TNEs. Much TNE rhetoric describes a one-way flow of expertise, not the mutually beneficial relationships of good partnerships. Through group discovery, this session aims to insert what we have learned about partnerships into this discussion.

An African Framework for Culturally Responsive Patient Care

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

Healthcare leaders may demonstrate knowledge about culturally competent care without necessarily actioning this. This illuminates the knowledge-action gap. Culturally responsive care is a relational and reflective process through which professionals and systems work with communities to deliver care that is clinically effective, culturally meaningful, linguistically accessible, respectful and safe. The "AFRICAN" model of culturally responsive care is proposed: Awareness, Flexibility, Respect, Inclusion, Communication, Agency and Negotiation. The model has several internationalization leadership implications.

How Global Shapes Local: Presidential Perspectives on Why Internationalization Matters Now

2:10 PM - 3:00 PM

Higher education presidents are navigating an increasingly complex landscape: declining public trust in higher education, concerns about civic engagement and democratic participation, workforce development, financial sustainability, geopolitical tensions, and growing scrutiny of international partnerships. Against this backdrop, some have questioned the role of internationalization in higher education. This presidential plenary reframes the conversation. Instead of asking, "Why internationalization?" the session asks, "How does internationalization help presidents solve the challenges they're already accountable for?" Presidents will discuss how internationalization is not a peripheral activity but a strategic imperative that strengthens institutional resilience, student success, community vitality, and national competitiveness. The conversation will explore how global competencies are as indispensable for today's graduates as quantitative reasoning, communication, and digital literacy. The panel will examine the relationship between global engagement and democratic citizenship, highlighting how international learning prepares students to navigate complex information, engage across differences, and contribute meaningfully to their local communities. Panelists will also consider the practical reality that global forces including supply chains, migration, technology, public health, security, and economic competitiveness shape every local community, whether institutions intentionally prepare students for that reality or not. Ultimately, the discussion will challenge attendees to consider that global issues are local issues, and that preparing students to understand that connection is important to the public mission of higher education.

Internationalization Across the System: Leading Global Engagement in Multi-Campus Universities

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

Public university systems present unique opportunities and complexities for internationalization. Drawing on leadership experiences from the University of Colorado and the University of Massachusetts, this session explores how multi-campus institutions collaborate on advocacy, federal policy implementation, research, international enrollment, global partnerships, education abroad, and student and scholar success. Panelists will discuss flagship leadership, campus perspectives, statewide initiatives such as Study Colorado and Study Massachusetts, and practical strategies for advancing internationalization through coordinated system-wide leadership.

From Operations to Strategy: Preparing the Next Generation of SIOs

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

How do international education professionals translate operational excellence into strategic leadership? This panel session brings together leaders from a small private institution, a community college, and a large public research university to explore pathways to the Senior International Officer (SIO) role. Through interactive assessments, discussion, and practical frameworks, participants will identify how functional expertise in as practitioners can be leveraged for strategic leadership, career advancement, and succession planning within international education.

Reading the Shift: International Enrollment Trends and What They Mean for Market Strategy

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

International enrollment is no longer a single growth story; it is a set of divergent regional stories, each shaped by policy shifts, visa climates, currency pressures, and competitor positioning. This session brings together two of the field's leading data sources — The Institute of International Education (IIE) and IDP Education — with institutional practitioners to unpack what the latest market-specific enrollment and demand data means for recruitment and strategic decision-making at the leadership level.

Centering Research in International Academic Partnerships Through Faculty Connections and AI Tools

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

Faculty-driven research collaborations and formal international partnerships often develop separately, leading to missed opportunities for broader institutional engagement. This disconnect frequently reflects organizational structures that place international partnerships and research administration in different administrative silos. Through case studies and interactive discussion, this session will explore strategies for connecting existing relationships--regardless of starting points--with institutional goals. Participants will examine successful models, common barriers, and approaches for building more integrated and impactful global partnerships.

Practice of Strategic Patience in Decision Making

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

This session explores “strategic patience” as a leadership tool to avoid hasty or rushed decisions and to slow down the decision-making process to “get it right.” This strategy is not delay, indecision, or hesitancy, but a discipline called “pacing decisions so they land at the right time.” (Jody Michael, Forbes Coaches Council, January 14, 2026).

Internationalization in Healthcare Education: Lessons Learned from Nursing Faculty

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

As populations globally are forced into human migration by climate change, complex humanitarian emergencies, and deepening inequality it is essential that healthcare education across the world prepares students by designing pedagogy that develops cultural humility. This session reviews lessons learned from two approaches in nursing education found to effectively do so: an interdisciplinary clinical study abroad and two Collaborative Online International Learning (COIL) partnerships.

Keeping the Flame Alive: Effective Institution-Agency Partnerships During Challenging Times

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

As international enrollment management (IEM) faces unprecedented and multifaceted headwinds, maintaining effective partnerships with trusted recruitment agency partners is more important than ever. This session explores why and how strategic IEM teams and their agencies can work together to keep the collaborative flame alive through the storm, and emerge stronger on the other side. Participants will learn best practices from AIRC survey data and established experts from the agency and institutional perspectives.

Systemness: What SIOs at Multi-Campus Public University Systems Can Learn from Each Other.

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

Senior International Officers at large public university systems like the California State University, SUNY, and their peers lead internationalization work under conditions that most leadership frameworks in the field don't quite fit. These SIOs typically hold systemwide responsibility without direct authority over individual campus presidents and provosts. They answer not only to their own institutions but to state legislatures, governing boards, and public appropriations processes. This session will explore internationalization issues at these institutions.

A Lifetime of Adaptability: Growing Leaders, Strengthening Institutions

3:55 PM - 4:45 PM

Whether you're leading today or preparing for a future leadership opportunity, growth requires continuous learning, adaptability, and a commitment to developing others. Join experienced education leaders as they reflect on the lessons, decisions, relationships, and pivotal moments that shaped their own leadership journeys. Together, we'll explore how current and emerging leaders can expand their influence, navigate career evolution with purpose, cultivate the next generation of talent, build resilient and collaborative teams, and foster institutional cultures that are prepared to thrive in an evolving global education landscape.
