

SPACE CRAZE

DISTRICT UNDER SIEGE

DC WEATHER FORECAST: ARMAGEDDON METEORITES AND FIRES

DEADLINE: AUGUST 19TH

As the smoke cleared, there were wails of distress in the distance. The crash had left its mark across the Residential District, the rocket Blank had piloted carving a deep gouge in the land before exploding. Trailing the wreckage had been meteors that had managed to punch through the weakened barrier.

Scattered pieces of metal that had broken off from the rocket upon its crash littered the area with damaged brick and shattered windows. Unsteady light flickered from the barrier, casting the ground in a glitchy, staticky hue. This contrasted with the yellow-red of flames from the burning trees and grass slowly catching in the park.

SPACE CRAZE

A loud boom sounded in the distance as another small meteor smashed partially into the barrier, fracturing and impacting somewhere in the city. The sounds of alarms ring out through the city and flash onto the screens of D-Vices and D-Vice connected smartphones owned by neo tamers.

Please take cover off of the streets and if possible, evacuate to the nearest shelter facility. If you need assistance, civil servants can guide you to your nearest underground shelter.

Digimon and humans alike were scattered across the courtyard of a nearby apartment building, in a daze after the first wave of meteors. What had originally seemed like the glittering lights of distant meteors revealed itself to be the evil glow of angry eyes, hellbent on devastation. Behind the passing celestial bodies hid badly glitching Digimon. Their singular shining orbs fixed upon the surveyors of the wreckage, tracking them through the dust and debris.

SPACE CRAZE

The Bemmon spilled into the city, crashing into the ground like a wave upon the shore. Chirping noises emitted hungrily from the swarm as it scattered throughout the city, seeking fresh victims upon which to wreak their mayhem.

In several places in the city, large forms crashed into the street and revealed themselves. The giant robotic forms lumbered towards the highest concentrations of residents. The presence of so many enemies caused the guardians to spring into action. However there were only so many places that they could be at once. So it fell to those who lived within the city walls to once again defend themselves and their homes.

SPACE CRAZE

Buildings are on fire! Meteorites are falling! And there are swarms of Bemmon and rampaging Tinmon!

WHAT WILL YOU DO??!

Participating in parts 1 and 2 before the Space Craze concludes will unlock champion if you do not have it unlocked yet! New and old unlockers can use their forms in this part of the event!

