

EAST COAST HOLINESS SUMMIT

Workshop

Racial Harmony ...to the tune of the Jeremiad

Rose Percy & Dave Capozzi

Pastors, Brockton Covenant Church

Do we sing to the tune of the empire or to the tune of the jeremiads of our time? This workshop will focus on developing just relationships across racial divides and the importance of continued discipleship in the journey towards racial justice. We will talk about the importance of hearing the call of the prophet, the preacher and the protestor and responding in the harmony of redemptive solidarity.

Bio - Rose Percy:

Rose Percy (she/her/hers) is a student at Boston University School of Theology, where she hopes to graduate with a Master of Divinity in 2022. Rose attended Eastern Nazarene College (ENC), where she studied religion with a concentration in social justice. During her time in college, Rose served as a student chaplain and worship leader in the Office of Spiritual Development. Rose received the Paul E. Williams Alumni Leadership Award for her investment in social justice dialogue in the ENC community and the Outstanding Senior Award for the Department of Religion and Culture for her writing on theology and ethics.

Rose believes in the power of personal narratives and uses her voice to talk about important issues. Through her writing, Rose blogs on topics such as social justice, theology, politics, and ethics from various intersectional identities.

Rose lives in Quincy, MA.

Bio - Dave Capozzi:

Dave is a husband to Jen and father to Andy, Annabelle and Oliver. He graduated with a B.A. in Business Administration from Eastern Nazarene College in 2003, and received his M.A. in Urban Ministry from Gordon-Conwell Boston (CUME) in 2016. Prior to becoming a pastor, Dave spent 6 years working with folks experiencing homelessness in Quincy and Brockton, MA and 5 years in finance. Information about his life aside, Dave experiences the greatest amount of joy spending time with his family and friends.
