

6 Planning activity: History is you. Descriptors

2. Once you know what you are going to do, look at the unit to find out what we are going to learn about..

a) Organise the following descriptors into the correct module, after briefly analysing the introductions to the modules and some of the activities.

- Discuss the leadership at the end of the Cold War inferring from sources the conditions, events and human actions that led to its ending.

- Describe the main characteristics of the Franco dictatorship based on information from different perspectives.

- Demonstrate your understanding of the insights that victims of violent past issues lived through based on their testimonies.

- Apply the research steps: make an hypothesis, research information, make connections and draw conclusions to answer the research question about post-cold war conflicts from different perspectives.

- Infer and discuss what values, attitudes and initiatives are essential to improve coexistence, while remaining aware of the historical memory of the victims and human dignity.

- Identify and infer from different types of sources (written, visual, oral,..) the characteristics of the Franco dictatorship.

- Infer and classify the actions against Human Rights and values in post-Cold War international conflicts.

- Identify and explain the main causes and events of the Cold War.

- Identify and infer the perspectives, objectives and bias of some written sources (mainly protagonists' speeches) of the post-war period.
