

Colors
by Kaylee Alameda

Everyday I see colors,
I see colors in the classroom,
I see colors outside,
And I see colors in people.

I see yellow in his hair and the way I feel when we talk.
I see orange in his personality and how much I laugh when we're together.
I see pink in his lips and on my face after a quick hello.
I see blue in his voice and how I feel when he's not around.
I see green in his eyes and in the envy I feel when he talks to her, jokes with her, flirts with her.

I see red in his passion when he's with her,
I see purple in smile when she gives him a quick hello.

I see grey in the world around me when they walk together,
I see black and white in everything, every time they touch it gets darker, and darker, till the only color left in the world is the green in his eyes,
But only when he looks at her.
