I think our experience as a school of using iPads is that we found them incredibly straightforward to manage.

But more importantly, the way that we can deploy them in class makes them a far more mobile device. It makes them a device which really chimes with our teaching and learning approaches and through some of the features and settings that are available.

Things like accessibility have really flown with our pupils. So they've really helped us to make our approach to teaching learning far more personalised for pupils and really become quite an important tool for us in terms of helping all of our children achieve the best that they can.
