Good morning, Cabin John Cougars! This is Mr. Lee with your morning announcements. Today is Wednesday, November 5th which means it is also National American Football Day which is football you play with your hands, which doesn't really make sense. Regardless, shout out to all the American Football fans although I know our school seems to be fans of the real Futbol.

It's National School Psychology Week!

Today we want to celebrate our amazing school psychologist, Ms. Braun! School psychologists help make sure every student gets the support they need to learn and grow. When a student might need extra help, Ms. Braun meets with them, talks to their teachers and families, and gives different assessments to understand how they learn best. Thanks to her work, students can access the right services and feel successful in school. If you see Ms. Braun, be sure to thank her for all she does for CJMS!

1935 - The world famous board game Monopoly is launched by Parker Brothers. One of my favorite games in which players practice financial literacy, learning to budget money, manage assets, and make strategic investments ironically all things not extensively taught in schools.
