

Ethical Charter for Country Localizers

Last updated: 9th of March 2024.

Independence

I affirm that I am not publicly affiliated with, working for, or representing any political party, candidate, or electoral list between now and the European Elections 2024.

Since Palumba strives to provide an orientation for who to vote for at an election, having members contributing to its content be publicly involved in the political scene is a conflict of interests and is a risk of internal manipulation. Therefore, while we resolutely recognise the value and necessity of political commitment, we wish to abstain from having contributors holding such roles at the moment.

Integrity

I will faithfully localize the content of the Palumba app, ensuring to the best of my ability the accurate matching between european-level parties·groups and the candidate lists·parties at the national level, restraining my personal views from interfering with the categorisations I will contribute to.

Feedback and Communication

I will actively participate in communication channels established by the « Country Cluster Coordinators (CCCs) », providing constructive feedback and seeking clarification when needed. It is perfectly fine to have a change of plans, but those need to be communicated as early as possible.

Confidentiality

I understand that the information shared during the process is confidential and will not be disclosed to any third party.

No Personal·Political Agenda

I acknowledge that my involvement in this project is solely for the purpose of contributing to a fair and accessible initiative, and I will not use this platform to advance any personal·political agenda.
