

Why Animals?

How would you feel if someone dressed in a white coat with gloves and goggles, came up to you and took you? They just took you and brought you to a random laboratory and you can't speak or talk. This is what some animals have to go through. They are taken from their home, and put in a laboratory for a random experiment they did not agree to be in, and you can't say anything. I would hate to go through this, so why are they having to go through this? No one cares about how the animals are treated during these experiments, and they are practically getting tortured. I believe it is wrong to do experiments on animals for medical and non medical purposes, and that this should be outlawed.

Experiments can be very expensive at times especially when doing experiments on animals. They can sometimes cost "hundreds of thousands—and sometimes millions—of dollars per substance examined." You'd think scientists would get paid hourly, which some do but if the experiment doesn't work they may not get paid. Not to mention you have to pay someone to get an animal for the experiment. Scientists have to kill an animal to get what they need for different and new medicines. It costs a lot of money just to put down an animal let alone make medicine from it. This is why I believe experiments on animals should be outlawed.

How would you feel if you were a scientist and you had to put your pet down, and had to move on in a couple of seconds because you needed to start making the medicine. I would feel sad knowing I did that especially because I've had my dog since I was five years old. Not to mention animals have souls, and feelings. Have you ever heard a dog cry, or when they are happy their tail will wag, and they will start to bark? Some "animals are being exploited by research facilities and cosmetics companies all across the country and all around the world. Animals have feelings too, so that is why they should not be experimented on.

Whenever scientists do experiments on animals they take forever! Not to mention how long it takes to set up a laboratory. Experiments on animals take years to set up, or even months just to start, not to mention how much time it takes just to get an animal to the laboratory. Experiments on animals take years to accomplish, and it may not even work out the way they wanted, or the way they expected. Experiments on animals take forever that is why I believe animals should not be experimented on.

Animals should not be experimented on for medical and non-medical use and it should be outlawed. I think this, because animal experimentation can be very expensive, animals have feelings too, and finally because experiments on animals take a long time. For these reasons animals should not be experimented on for their sake, and do not deserve to go through this. Animal experimentation is basically “animals that are cruelly snatched from their natural habitats or farmed in inhumane conditions.” With all of this being said I believe that it is wrong for animals to be experimented on for medical and non-medical use and that this should be outlawed.

Source Citation (Include your sources below the line.)

<https://www.humaneworld.org › news › costs-animal-and>

cost of hundreds of thousands—and sometimes millions—of dollars per substance examined

<https://www.lonestar.edu › stopanimaltesting> animals are being exploited by research facilities and cosmetics companies all across the country and all around the world

<https://www.worldanimalprotection.org.au › our-work>

animals are cruelly snatched from their natural habitats or farmed in inhumane conditions