

5 Outstanding Tips for Teaching Speaking English to YL

You have come to the perfect place if you are an English teacher struggling to get your students to speak English fluently. We know that teaching this skill is challenging as it depends on the other three skills, listening, Reading, and Writing. Additionally, speaking skill is considered very demanded in this technology era where most job interviews and tests require English fluency.

Here in this blog, you will find five valuable tips to follow while teaching speaking English.

1. Be patient:

One of the most essential pieces of advice to keep in mind is to have patience since it takes a long time to see results while learning this skill in particular. Many students have the desire to get better and get engaged in class discussions, but they take a step backwards seeing the teacher angry all the time instead of letting students feel free in order to learn effectively.

2. Be Creative:

Realizing that children's attention span is limited or in other words, they get bored very fast, leads us to think more about the environment of the class and how to make it enjoyable for your students. Talking about creativity actually means the different activities you perform in the class which go with the lesson you explain properly.

3. Be supportive:

For young learners, having a supportive teacher is undoubtedly an important point throughout the whole process. The teacher should give guidelines and instructions for any activity or lesson as a first step to let students have the base ground. This step encourages them to speak more as they understand what they should do even if they have difficulties in the beginning.

4. Give Students Time:

We are all aware that thinking through an answer takes time, so when students need to think quickly in order to respond appropriately orally, the teacher must give them some breathing space. Silence in this situation indicates that the student is doing well because he is simultaneously focusing and trying his best to perform among his peers.

5. Be clear:

It is crucial that the teacher knows the level of his/her students so he/she uses suitable language while talking with them. This means using simple or complex vocabulary and accents as well without missing out on the simplicity required in both levels so your students can understand everything you say.

To sum up, it is very important to be patient, clear, supportive, and creative while teaching the listening skill to your students. It is not easy, yet it is not impossible! You can learn more tips for better performance.
