Parents should encourage their children to develop a healthy sense of humor. Indeed, they should serve as a role model for this development. Looking at the lighter side of life certainly can help many families through tense and stressful situations. Maybe, laughter and humor are undervalued because they seem relatively unscientific, too simple and complex when compared to other techniques of stress management. Is it possible that your sense of humor needs to be exercised ? If you don't value laughter you may suppress the urge to laugh. A good Laugh may benefit a person's heart (by increasing blood circulation) his or her muscles , and lungs. Try to make laughter and a good sense of humor part of your daily life. This will alleviate your stress and help you cope with it. Like many other helpful things in life, laughter is free. Moreover, laughter is contagious since associating with others who like to laugh will make you laugh and develop a good sense of humor.				READ AND BASE ALL YOUR ANSWERS ON THE TEXT. 1.
