Make.

PROMPT

Greetings, Participants! As you might be aware, at X, we celebrate the idea of Make, which is, the belief that everyone regardless of their identity, has a duty to create something useful. We foster creativity. Limitless, unbound, and radical creativity. You have the freedom to stand out, the freedom to innovate with no fetters limiting you other than your own capability. We do, however, have one compulsion, and that is, to Make. At X, you must Make something novel, something crazy, something that is entirely the product of your imagination.

General Prompt:
In the summer of 2009, representatives of four global superpowers met at the Russian Federation, to discuss issues such as the reform of the global financial architecture. These countries came to be known as the BRIC foundation.

BRICS seeks to deepen, broaden and intensify cooperation within the grouping and among the individual countries for more, equitable and mutually beneficial development, keeping sustainability as the topmost priority.

Taking inspiration from the Sustainable Development Goals given by the UNGA, BRICS seeks to implement these goals in the perspective of developing nations.

Your job is to keep a nation in mind, alongside an issue it is currently facing, and design a product which shall help humanity work through said issue.

All teams are required to present a prototype of their product. This can be accompanied by any other multimedia presentation such as mockups, videos, websites or 3D models. It is completely up to you.

The format for Make can be found at minet.co/make
