Life is simply unfair, don't you think?

There are moments when a single snail can make a world go extinct.
Even a world as small as the mine of you.

I am Zero and this is the Decision Game, a game where six of you must die in order for escape to become possible. Of course, there TODS is the possibility of there being more than six deaths. For each death that happens, I will give you one X-Press. You need six X-Presses to open the X-Door, your gate to freedom.

Of course, you need a way to earn these keys and although life is unfair, I am not. I will allow each of you to earn a varying number of X-Presses through decisions. Each decision will pit you against a different dilemma, one that I will decide. Choose wisely and you may be able to get all of the X-Presses you need to escape in one decision. However, will you truly be able to live with that decision? The choice is yours.

Before each decision, I will allow you 45 minutes to hunker amongst yourselves. For each consecutive round, the time will drop by 5 minutes. After this time period elapses your next decision will begin. Each decision's time limit will be based upon the decision itself, with a maximum of 20. After that decision, you will then be injected with a sleeping drug.

Though, there IS one alternative. Amongst the mine of you has a partner is crime, one sole person is league with me and my plans. If you somehow manage to determine their identity, and by extension mine, I will play fairly. I will stop forward and allow you the choice of killing both of us in exchange of the X-Door opening. However, there IS one condition. If you manage to kill both me and my partner, you will only need two X-Presses to escape.

But before you get any funny ideas, my partner and I will not count towards those X-Presses so you will have to make a hard decision on your own. However, two lives versus six lives is quite an easy choice, don't you think? The fate of your world rests on your decision.

The Rules

This Zero aschule has got to be stopped. The only way to stop Zero is by defeating his three generals, and then the big bad himself.

Are you a true hero?

Many warriors from all over the world have arrived at the gate of the City of Zero, all with the same goal in mind, defeating Zero.

- Some of the inhabitants of the city of Zero are friendly, some are not. It's up to the players to decide who to trust and who not to trust, though it's generally okay to trust the law fields.
- There are 3 main phases of your adventure.
 - Exploration - Investigate various locations in Zero City to gather clues. During this phase talking to each other is encouraged, it may be the only peaceful time to do so.
 - Decisions - Tough life altering choices must be made by the players. These scenarios cannot be solved with team brute force.
 - Battle - Encounter with malicious opponents! Sometimes in life all you can do is fight. Kill or be killed.
 - During the Exploration Phase, the Zero Guide will take players to new locations within Zero City. Players can either investigate their surroundings or Talk to NPC's. For a fee, the Zero Guide can return players to a safe area.
 - During the Decision Phase, players will be forced to participate in a life or death game that

Life is simply unfair, don't you think?

The participants in the game will be split into 3 teams:
Humans, Monsters, and The Devil.

Each player is given a role that has specific actions it can fulfill.

There are two main phases: Night and Day.

At Night, the monsters will have the opportunity to roam in secret.

During Day, all players debate over the last events and at the end of this discussion phase, a vote will be held.

The player with the majority of votes against them will be executed by Zero.

You will be encouraged to write in your journal any actions you did or your suspicions.

If, at one point, all the monsters or all the humans have been slain, the game will end.
The Devil will have an alternate objective to fulfill during the game.

Correctly identifying The Devil will cause the game to immediately end.
