Subject line: People thought I was buying followers for my Tiktok account...

Picture this: Lockdown. Tiktok was all the rage and I was the black sheep.

I had never used Tiktok. Not even once.

But, in my smelly low-rent flat, stuck there for months, I had a dream.

And that dream was to get popular. Famous even. To get out of the ghetto.

So I began working tirelessly on my account, without stopping.

Weeks passed, and to my dismay...

I had amassed a total of... 17 followers. With most of them being my friends. What a failure.

But I wasn't ready to give up. I wanted to get better.

And so, I searched for days. I hunted tips & sneaky techniques to get more popular, searching everywhere like a police dog (without the white powder of course)...

One year later, I couldn't believe it. I had gained 52,000 followers in under a month.

Tiktok temporarily restricted my account because of my growth. They thought I bought followers. And frankly, my older self would have thought the same.

But while I did learn a lot by myself, I also lost a lot of time reinventing the wheel.

You can either be like me and spend about a year stumbling around looking for tips and tricks...

...or learn from my mistakes and implement secret methods that work ALMOST OVERNIGHT.
