

Patrick McGlothlin

I have been farming in the Snoqualmie Valley for the last 4 years with my partner Meredith. Last year we were able to purchase our own property in the valley where we currently live and farm (mixed vegetable and eggs). I also work off farm managing commercial construction projects for a regional General Contractor.

I view the Watershed Improvement District (WID) as an important opportunity to help protect the long term viability of agriculture in our valley. The initial Commissioners elected to the WID will play an important role in developing the foundation of the district, its focus and involvement, and long term strategies for funding and operation. I feel my background in managing complex projects, leading large teams towards a common goal, and working with jurisdictional agencies, along with my vested interest in the valley's agricultural community make me a good candidate for a WID Commissioner.
