

Bailey, Starr, McNair Scholar, and Dr. Marie A. Wakefield. "Emotional, Psychological, and Behavioral Challenges of Children with Incarcerated Parents." Human Services Major Department of Educational and Clinical Studies, n.d. Web. 26 Apr. 2017.

http://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1052&context=mcnair_posters

This website focuses on the emotional and psychological challenges within children of incarcerated parents. It shows the importance of the dangers that are caused throughout a young adult and child's life when one of their parents are imprisoned. There is also studies that gives information regarding statistics dealing with the percent of children and young adults who unfortunately lost a parent to the system.

This website is a simple guide for how some will organize or go about sharing their research with other people. The source has a clear visual, with a graph and explanations. As of help, examples, or an idea, this source will help out with what a graph should contain or express.

"Children's Antisocial Behavior, Mental Health, Drug Use, and Educational Performance After Parental Incarceration." Psychological Bulletin. NCBI, 9 Jan. 2012. Web. 25 Apr. 2017.

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC3283435/>

This source touches on mostly all of the subjects and areas dealing with behavioral issues with children of incarcerated parents. The problems that are being studied are antisocial behavior issues, mental health issues, drug use with older children and teenagers, and educational performances. It touches on a child's behavior and how going through parental incarceration affects their future. This is a broad research on the circumstances parents and children are put in and the causes of a parent having to be subjected to going to prison.

This specific resource helps with a lot of information from a doctor's perspective. So, there is a variety of hands on work and experience with children who are victims of incarcerated parents. This website is a reliable source that gives multiple information that can be used and or quoted.

Lee, Rasalyn D., Xiandming Fang, and Feijun Luo. "The Impact of Parental Incarceration on the Physical and Mental Health of Young Adults." PMC. N.p., n.d. Web. 26 Apr. 2017.

<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC3608482/>

This resource goes into young adults or teenagers and how having an incarcerated parent of their past or present impacted their physical and mental health. It analyzes how anxiety or depression, can affect their figure, which is really interesting. There is also important information about how the gender of the parent affects the child's emotional state and their future emotionally.

As of further information, this source is good for providing information on the future of the child or children, and how their lives when they are older will be impacted. This is also a great source for gathering information about adolescent health.

Long, Brittany Lee. "Help Children Left Behind: Children of Incarcerated Parents." Force Change. N.p., n.d. Web. 26 Apr. 2017.

<https://forcechange.com/20102/help-children-left-behind-children-of-incarcerated-parents/>

“Help Children Left Behind” is a very encouraging and persuasive website that gives insight to a child’s life and health concerning parental incarceration. Although the information here on this site is simple, it is very real. There is a lot said about the criminal justice system, and how parental incarceration doesn’t just affect the children, but it affects the whole family.

Help Children Left Behind is not just a website that gives information, but a petition to get the help of the public to ensure these children can maintain a healthy relationship with their parent that is imprisoned. This source is one of the many that gives readers an idea of how they can go about helping the children and the parents all at the same time.

You And The World Project for English 1: Nashay and Teyonna McCord. . Dir. Teyonna L. Little. Perf. Teyonna McCord and Nashay McCord. N.p., 18 May 2017. Web. 18 May 2017.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4KWu3A_i-z4&feature=youtu.be

This is the interview casting Nashay McCord answering Teyonna McCord’s interview questions. In this interview, she shares her personal experiences dealing with her father’s incarceration. She also talks about what effects and changes that her father being incarcerated has caused with her health, behavioral health, educational life, and social life.

From this interview, there is a wide difference in the effects in kids. Everyone is affected differently and handles the situations in different ways. Also noticing that the age of the child may have an impact on how the child is impacted. Older kids may handle the situation in a more adult way, but is still a child at heart, and feel they are missing something.

Alexander, Amy. "Why Children With Parents in Prison Are Especially Burdened." The Atlantic.

National Journal, 14 Dec. 2015. Web. 8 June 2017.

<https://www.theatlantic.com/politics/archive/2015/12/why-children-with-parents-in-prison-are-especially-burdened/433638/>

