TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Chulalongkorn School of Integrated Innovation

Full-Time Faculty Member, 2024- Present

5606308 Innovation for the Sustainable Development Goals (Undergraduate)

- This course explores the United Nations' 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), emphasizing their interconnectedness and equipping students to address global challenges such as climate change, responsible consumption, gender equality, and pandemics. Through discussions, group work, and guest speakers, students explore specific issues and design innovative solutions using design thinking principles, fostering the skills and knowledge needed to contribute to a sustainable future.

5606304 Profit with Purpose: Business Strategies for Sustainability (Undergraduate)

- This course explores Social Enterprises, Corporate Social Responsibility and Corporate Social Investment, offering insights into the intricate dynamics of Social Enterprises and the Non-Governmental Organizations sector. Through a case-method approach, students will explore the strategies, challenges, and impacts associated with these domains. Students will have a holistic understanding of the intersection between corporate initiatives and their broader societal implications.

5606203 Taylor Swift and Social Change (Undergraduate)

- Exploring Taylor Swift's influence on contemporary social change; focusing on the themes of gender equality, women's empowerment, and intellectual property rights; analyzing her music, legal battles, and public advocacy; investigating her contributions to gender equality, sexual harassment awareness, LGBTQ+ rights, and political engagement; highlights of her transformation from a pop icon to a global advocate; providing insights into the intersection of art, activism, and social change.

Faculty of Law, Chulalongkorn University

Adjunct Lecturer, 2026- Present

3480492 Justice Innovation Lab (Undergraduate)

- This course explores contemporary justice challenges through the lens of innovation and design thinking. Students examine how issues such as access to justice, inequality, gender justice, climate change, digital governance, and public health intersect with legal systems and affect different stakeholders. Through discussions, group work, field interviews, and hands-on studio activities, students learn to identify justice gaps and co-design innovative, justice-oriented solutions. The course equips students with practical tools and mindsets to rethink the role of law and legal professionals in advancing more inclusive, equitable, and sustainable societies.

Tokyo Institute of Technology

Adjunct Lecturer (Graduate), 2022- 2023

GEG.I411 Education for Sustainable Development through Design and Technology (Graduate)

- This course focuses on Education for Sustainable Development (ESD) as the unifying theme on different sustainability aspects, such as climate changes, responsible consumption, resource management, gender equality, recent pandemic, and other pressing global issues. It empowers communities and individuals to have a critical understanding of the underlying and interconnected issues and be part of the solutions. In this course, students will discuss and explore social, economic, and environmental issues within and beyond their localities while sharing their solutions with other group members. Ultimately, each group will investigate the social and environmental problems of their interest through various user experience research methods. Guest speakers from different fields related to the SDGs will also be invited to provide the students with new perspectives to kick start their project ideas. The second part of the course focuses on designing and creating innovative solutions to their choice's local or global sustainability issue, using the design thinking process and fabrication tools. Engaging in a maker-centered learning environment, this hands-on, project-based course provides the students' opportunities to design and create. The final project aims to foster the skills, knowledge, awareness, and attitudes to help the students address the identified issues and build a sustainable future.

Teachers College, Columbia University

Course Assistant, 2018- 2020

MSTU 5027 Tools & Toys for Knowledge Construction (Graduate)

- A hands-on design course intended to introduce core tenets and techniques of constructionist design. We explore and evaluate educational technologies including virtual construction environments and tools for creating digital games, simulations, and prototyping equipment. I took an active role in course planning and meeting with students regularly to discuss readings, fabrication projects, and writing. I instructed the in-class design sessions and facilitated students' projects at the makerspace.

MSTU 4000 Core Seminar in Communication, Media, and Learning Technologies Design
(Graduate)

- Required class for all master and doctoral students. I gave recommendations and advise master students on their Integrative Projects.
