THE REPUBLIC OF ARKANSAS

-=-

Governor-elect, mister Henry Massey Rector, stood in the town hall of Little Rock, surrounded by trusted advisors of his political run, deep in thought, a pen in hand and a declaration before him, in the desk, to sign. He looked over, there stood John I. Stirman, secretary of the State of Arkansas, and now vice-governor, since the dissolution of the States.

“So, good men, is this what all of you wish?” the Governor, mister Rector asked those present in the room. All responded with aye. The Governor smiled, scratching his beard for a moment and nodding. “Then, it shall be done. For the betterment of the people of Arkansas and the State. God bless us, gentlemen.”

-=-

THE DECREE OF SEGREGATION

Let it be known, that from this day onwards, Arkansas, like all the states of the dissolved United States, is now a free, independent nation and away from the claws of the liberals of the North. Let it be known that Arkansas will no longer take the insults once driven to it, and under the light of God, and the guidance we're provided by Him, we declare that Arkansas is now to be called 'The Republic of Arkansas', with His Excellency, Henry Massey Rector as chosen President by the ex-Secretary of State and the Council. And thus, to begin a healthy, wealthy and successful government in the country of Arkansas, we doth decree:

-All men are now declared free and owners of their own free will, and have a right to private property, food, health and basic care.

-All coloured men are now declared segregated from society, incapable of holding positions within the government or in public buildings. They are also forbid the right to private property, as they are declared to be property themselves. Slave markets are now reopen and encouraged, to flourish a wealthy economy.

-All women are now declared free and owners of their own free will, and have a right to food, health and basic care, and private property provided by their husbands.

THE DECREE OF RELATIONS

Let it be known to all other states that Arkansas encourages and provides trade pacts, despite political differences and wishes for a steady growth and healthy relations with it's neighbors. Should any desire, pen an official leter to Mr President Rector or visit him personally.

DECREE OF THE ARMY

The once proud National Guard of Arkansas is now reformed and commanded by the Secretary of Defense and the General of the Army as the National Army of Arkansas, under General Thomas J. Churchill. Conscription for men is mandatory at 18 years of age, but regulated. Mandatory year of training camp and then voluntary service from therein.

THE PRESIDENTIAL HOUSE

Mr President Henry Massey Rector

General of the Army, General Thomas J. Churchill

Vice-President, His Excellency James Stirman Standley

Secretary of State, His Excellency, Major Patrick Cleburne

Secretary of Foreign Relations, His Honor, Brigadier Albert Rust

-=-

REGNAT POPULUS.

ACTIONS

-Institution of the Republic of Arkansas

-Segregation of the blacks.

-Institution of the National Army of Arkansas and mandatory conscription at 18 plus 1 year of mandatory training camp.