A website for medical students and residents to share stories (blog-style) for other to read and get inspired: www.whitecoated.com

Just wanted to share something I found today. I'm a big fan of Picmonic and SketchyMedical and just found a site that allows you to share any that you've made. There isn't much on there yet, but it's something to check out. The site is www.doctoredimagesmd.com

I have found another useful website. The site is a community based for doctors. It has various features of profile building, forum discussion, publishing papers and patient doctor communication. here is a link <http://thedoc.org>

I have been using this amazing medical app, Figure 1, which is free and provides thousands of real-world medical cases. It's a great resource for studying for exams and discussing classic/rare medical cases with experienced healthcare professionals.

Adding Preceptor Buddy (www.preceptorbuddy.com). Great free site for med students and allied health professions to rate their preceptors!
