

Tantra, Sacred Eros, Tantric BDSM, Sexual Healing Definitions

By Francesca Gentile

SACRED EROS - Are practices of becoming conscious and at choice with our arousal, erotic energy exchange, intentions, and how we use them to bring greater wholeness, intimacy, healing, and peace to ourselves and our world. All cultures have ancient practices of Sacred Eros hidden in their myths, fairytales, archeology, ethnography, and religious texts.

Some most often practiced today. . .

TANTRA - An Eastern Spiritual Path dedicated to the Loving and Unconditional Acceptance of All that is. Instead of subjugating the body or rising above it, Tantra embraces the learning of the embodied experience (in all its flavors) to blast the heart wide open to compassion and nonduality.

BUDDHIST TANTRA contains “White” practices (clear, non-sexual, visualizations, breath work, mantras/chanting, mudras/hand-body postures, yantras/pictures). It is founded upon the practice of the compassionate path. It practices releasing judgmentalism and duality.

HINDU TANTRA can be “White” (meditative, non-sexual). It can also include “Pink” practices (erotic breath and touching), red (genital intercourse), “Black “ practices (everything in life). The GOAL is union with The Divine ALL. In India today practicing Tantra is considered a dangerous path because, if not done well, can lead to addiction and excess.

KAMA SUTRA means teachings (sutra) of love (kama). It is a compilation of physical, romantic, hands on, body on, relationship, conversational and sex practices designed to connect, ignite and harmonize the sex life of the couple. It is not Tantra. However, it also comes from India.

WESTERN OR NEO-TANTRA - A Western Eclectic Spiritual Path dedicated to opening the heart, connecting the chakra/energy centers and enhancing lovemaking. Neo-Tantra uses some traditional Eastern Tantric exercises and combines them with whatever other traditions and teachings the instructor has to offer. It embraces and glorifies the embodied experience. The GOAL is a more loving, connective, juicier experience with one's love(rs).

TANTRIC BDSM: Tantra by nature of its weave is inclusive of what in the modern world are the toys and tools of BDSM. In its cultural origins in India and Tibet there would have no distinction between intimate and/or sensation based practices of kissing, breathing energy with intention, yab yum, or lying on a bed of nails, self flagellation, being tied, intercourse etc. In India and Tibet it can be considered a blessing to bath in or to drink the pee of a rimpoché or llama (blessed one) or to eat their scat.

Tantra weaves and balances the yin and yang, the death and life, the suffering and joy of life. Neither are to be avoided nor compulsively attached to. Yet, there are practices which can restore balance or harmony. So at times, we might choose to practice more of the light or of the dark, more of one than another. It is all part of The One.

SACRED SEXUALITY - A World Wide concept. Most countries and religions have some version of Sacred Sexuality as a tradition. Christianity, Judaism, Islam all have sacred sexual traditions if you know where to look. Buddhist Tantra is one example of a Sacred Sexual Tradition within a religion.

There are two main perspectives on Sacred Sexuality:

1. All Sex Is Inherently Sacred.
2. Sex is Sacred When Paired with Conscious Collaborative Intent and Consent (which can be revoked at any time).

SEX MAGICK - Uses the energy available in arousal and sex to focus on attaining one's goals. This can be anything from a new car, to personal healing, to world peace (etcetera).

SEXUAL SHAMANISM - Shaman is a Mongolian word for holistic spiritual healer that has come to represent any healer within a lineage of earth based traditions of song, medicine story, movement, dream walking, spirit animals, ritual, shadow work, and healing of trauma.

Around the world Shamans acknowledge and work with multiple planes of existence, view the universe as animate and sacred, and who seeks to restore harmony. The Shaman acts as a bridge and balancer between the worlds of male/female, life/death, endings/beginnings, heaven/earth/the great below, health/disease, and more.

Sexual Shamanism is a modern term that some practitioners utilize when they suggest that they are trained to be a bridge, healer, and harmonizer of spirit, matter and Eros of the client.

SHAMANIC KINK - The roots of pain as a pathway to vision quest, deprivation of sensation to open the Inner Eye, offering of pain for prayer, and ritual theatre that includes loss, death, grieving and rebirth originate in ancient and indigenous cultures.

Shamanic Kink is a practice that brings together the tools and frameworks of kink/BDSM with intentional ritual, somatic awareness, and transformational work. It weaves together ancient mythos, ritual theatre, invocation, evocation, chanting, as well as the use of altars and circle technology.

It uses power-exchange, sensation play, role-play or other “kinky” elements, not purely for erotic or sensational ends, but as conduits into deeper healing, embodiment, expression, and integration.

HEALTH & SEXUAL HEALTH:

Eastern Medicine is based on a Yin/Yang concept of energy, flow, and balance. When the energy is stuck or imbalanced we become dis-eased. In Eastern Medicine it was believed that we are meant to be healthy. It is the Doctor’s job to keep us healthy not to intervene in dis-ease. If there is dis-ease, the Dr has already failed in his/her duty.

Until the last few hundred years sexuality was a major focus of keeping the body (and its energy system) in balance and flow. Intricate systems of sexual knowledge were created including body postures/positions for sex (that enhance particular types of energetic flow), breathing techniques, and visualization techniques. Many of these can still be found in Taoist Sexual Trainings.

SEXUAL HEALING - Most people in our western culture carry some amount of sexual wounding and emotional wounding from being raised in a culture, family and/or religion that is sex negative, body negative, sex superficial, emotionally suppressing, anti-aging, and body dominating culture. Many of us also carry some amount of sexual wounding from rejections, denigrations, inappropriate physical touch, as well as the crossing of our own boundaries to be liked, or to receive an illusion of love.

SEXUAL HEALING WORK uses workshops, visualizations, massage, dialogue, sensuality and sexuality to bring past wounds to consciousness, face them, release them and/or reprogram them.

Sexual Healing can be undertaken through:

- Psychotherapy (Counseling, Coaching),
- Energy Work (Reiki, Polarity Therapy etc),
- Somatic Therapy (Dance Therapies, Movement Therapies, Touch & Massage Therapies, EMDR, Somatic Experiencing, Therapeutic Tantra, Therapeutic BDSM etc)
- Ontological Work (Being),
- Ritual/Magic/Prayer (with or without Medicine Plants)
- Emotional Release Work,
- Therapeutic Role Play (Gestalt, Inner Voice Dialogue, Drama Therapy, Family Constellations, Jungian Psychotherapy, Shamanic Soul Coaching, Shamanic Sensual Healing etc)
- Tantra,
- Tantric BDSM
- Therapeutic BDSM
- Sexuality, and Sacred Sexuality Workshops

HEALTH, SEXUAL ENTHUSIASM, & BEING SPIRITUALLY ADVANCED:

I find there is confusion, or collapsing, between health, sexual enthusiasm, and spirituality. There is an assumption that if one is healthy, enjoying lots of sex, and filled with chi, this automatically means that one is more spiritually advanced.

There is a similar confusion with the Christian perspective that monetary success means that one is spiritually developed. That is to say if someone became financially successful they were obviously spiritually advanced and favored by God.

While low chi, lack of sex, and/or depleted finances can indicate a wound or stuck place in our energy system, the converse does not necessarily imply greater enlightenment. It is possible to have strong chi, lots of sex, and be an energy vampire, sex addict or something else. It is possible to have financial success and be a power hungry dominator.

This is not to say that financial or sexual abundance equates with dysfunction.

SEXUAL VIBRANCY VERSUS SEXUAL COMPULSIVITY

In India Tantra is considered a risky path because it is easy for the human body to get captured in a web of addiction to pleasure and avoidance of pain. In Neo-Tantra this can also be the case.

While a vibrant sexuality and libido, balanced with consciousness, and internal choice is considered healthy, it is easy for the primal brain to become allured into thinking more pleasure is better. There are predators, addicts, and manipulators within the Neo Tantra community (as participants as well as teachers) along with truly wonderful people.

Use caution when choosing where and with whom to participate.

THE GIFT OF CONSCIOUS SEXUALITY: I find that intentionally focusing on breath work, visualizations and bodywork during sexuality with my beloved brings about greater energy, and physical well-being. This is especially true when it is approached with a gentle compassionate heart, integrity and truth.

ADDITIVE RELATIONSHIP PRACTICES include Compassionate Boundaries, Gracious Authenticity, Holistic Fitness, and Healthful Eating.

NOTE: Tantric Texts say that it takes a minimum of 30 - 45 minutes of breath work, arousal, foreplay and/or intercourse to start truly re-charging our internal batteries and aligning and energizing our systems.

Many videos, books and courses teach methods to prolong high states of arousal without ejaculation and/or with multiple energy orgasms for all genders.
