

Why you'll never be rich...

Let's start at the beginning.

Through time, humans worked hard to make a living.

Hunting in the forest, building the pyramids, mining the coal to keep your family warm,

Back in those days,

working back then was in simple words back-breaking and deadly,

with little to no pay.

No different from how the 9 to 5 works nowadays,

Now, you have a "choice".

Working jobs that don't have a higher chance of death but a salary that will give you anxiety from the bills you have to pay,

Check by check,

leaving you with nothing,

and putting you in an early grave because of stress.

Or

Choose to work a higher-risk job that pays a decent amount,

but the probability of you dying via accident is 10x higher.

So your choices are a fast or slow death for a few bucks.

Nobody gets rich with a salary.

However, there is a third choice that no one talks enough about.

Build a business from the ground up.

Of course, with every choice, there's a risk.

But for this choice,

the only risk is how consistent you will be.

Here in The Real World,

we provide the grounds to start building,

but you must make the blueprint and support to keep it upright.

The first steps are the hardest,

but if you keep going,

you'll escape.

There will be harsh lessons along the way,

but the more you learn,

the easier it gets to not make mistakes in the future.
