

Same Skies is the regional democracy think tank for West Yorkshire.

We create connections between people and places in West Yorkshire for our common good.

We challenge the leaders of West Yorkshire to listen to, and make the most of, the skills, knowledge and experience of the people who live and work here, and we hold them to account if they don't.

We are a think tank that is about a place and the people who live and work here. That means that we are interested in everything that happens here, and the interrelationships between different aspects of our society, economy, cultures, politics and environment. What can we create by bringing people with different kinds of knowledge together?

We care about the whole region, its towns, villages, suburbs and natural environment as well as its city centres.

We challenge national power in every way that it affects us, and demand that every decision about our lives that can be made in West Yorkshire is made in West Yorkshire.
