In the book Free as a Bird: The Story of Malala, Malala says she speaks not for herself, but for all girls and boys. Think about a time when you saw someone standing up for what was right, or when you stood up for what was right.

1. Discuss this with a grown up or older person in your household. What happened? Who was involved? Who stood up for what was right? Discuss how this may have been difficult for everyone involved.
2. Draw a picture of someone “engaging in civil discourse.” This someone could be you, a household member, a person from school, or a person from the news. Next, label the picture and write a brief description.
