

JD below; strong US celebrity knowledge, experience with editing (and ability to self-edit) and good legal judgement are musts. Please note: we are looking for people who can work Saturday and Sunday (as well as 1-2 days midweek) from 7am. If that's you, drop me a line with CV and clips to tufayel.ahmed@usmagazine.com.

Job description

Us Weekly is seeking a weekend early morning editor-writer — likely based overseas in the UK due to timing — for <http://UsMagazine.com>, which is read by over 21 million unique users monthly. This person will work a 6-8 hour shift (3-4 days a week, including Saturday and Sunday) starting around 2am EST — covering the most urgent, timely, buzzy and traffic-generating celebrity and entertainment news stories for a U.S. audience. This is a high-paced, high-volume role. Candidates should have a deep well of experience writing online for American celebrity/entertainment outlets, a knack for crafting creative, Us-friendly angles and SEO-savvy headlines, a sharp sense of our audience and brand voice, and an ease working in CMS and standard photo editing. Candidates would work independently on weekends, and thus must be trustworthy and self-sufficient. Salary: $40.00 per hour
