TRIGGER WARNING, THIS DOCUMENT INCLUDES

NSFW/DARKSHIP/LOLI/SHOTA/SELF HARM/NAZI/RAPE/ZOOPHILIA

After taking time to process everything and talking it through with friends, I've decided that it's best for me to speak openly about Vekoma's behavior and my experiences with him.

This is not an invitation to harass or attack him, this is purely for awareness and to share my truth.

I'm not claiming to be perfect or without fault, but I'm genuinely exhausted from how deeply hurt I've been by his actions, especially when the narrative is shifted to make it seem like I'm the one who's more in the wrong. I'm speaking up now because staying silent has only continued to harm me. I'm not sharing this to deflect responsibility from myself, nor to incite harassment. I am sharing this because these experiences caused real harm, and the way they were handled by Vekoma significantly contributed to that harm.

There's also a document on Vekoma's past behaviour, go check that out because I feel like this is important.

Deadloxx Allegations

Quick on note, Vekoma deleted all of the messages he sent to me, you're going to have to trust my words on some of these because I wasn't able to screenshot them in time.

Encouraging/Worsening my behaviour

I want to further clarify my statement regarding the proship stuff. While I acknowledge that I brought it up at one point, I was not the only person who introduced that behavior. At the time, I was playing roblox with Vekoma when one of their friends suddenly joined us. Almost immediately, their friend with another person began roleplaying inappropriately. This was happening in front of someone who was very likely a child. Despite this, they allowed this person to actively participate. During this entire thing, they were joking about shotas as well.

A screenshot Vekoma had of this happening.

I was in a vulnerable state and actively trying to recover during this time. After that, I messaged Vekoma privately, attempting to joke along due to how open I felt with him.

Rather than expressing discomfort or setting boundaries, Vekoma encouraged the behavior further, including calling me a shota as well.

There was also a time during a voice call where Vekoma asked if I would be okay with them screaming the n word sometimes. This occurred after I explained my past racist comments from when I was 12 back then, and how I had taken responsibility for them and grown since then. Their justification for using the slur was simply that they had “anger issues.”

As time went on, during another voice call, Vekoma confessed to me in an unclear manner. I didn't even realize it was a confession until the third attempt, when they directly asked me to be queer-platonic partners. I agreed, despite knowing I struggle deeply with relationships, because I did not want to hurt them or make them feel rejected.

Later, when I was not in a stable mental state and had relapsed, I confided in Vekoma that I felt the urge to self-harm by carving his name into my skin. I was not met with concern, hesitation, or an attempt to stop me. Instead, I was encouraged further, going as far as being given advice on how to hurt myself, or asking me if I've already got a blade myself

Ill take it out when my dad is like sleeping

This went as far as him offering to label themselves as a groomer in an attempt to make me feel more “comfortable” and “safe” around proshipping, rather than recognizing how inappropriate and harmful that behavior was.

There were also these incidents. On multiple occasions, Vekoma asked if I wanted to see his boobs. I initially assumed this was a joke and said yes without understanding the seriousness of what would follow. Instead, I was actually sent his actual boobs.

This resulted in me being placed in possession of content I should never have been exposed to. In addition to this, Vekoma asked me to send images of myself as well, during my school hours.

I complied at the time out of guilt and pressure, feeling responsible because I was the only person he was sending things to, and I didn't feel safe or confident enough to refuse.

After the callout he did, Vekoma deleted his messages, and I am really relieved that I am no longer in possession of any of that content. But, he still retains images of mine, and that really causes me ongoing fear and distress regarding what could be done with them.

Admittedly, there were times when I did respond in ways that enabled him to send those images. This was not because I really wanted them, but because he would become upset or angry with me if I didn't acknowledge his chest, specifically making comments about how I wasn't thinking about his chest. Over time, this was creating pressure that made it difficult for me to say no or disengage safely.

Our relationship

We talked frequently—often for most of the day. However, whenever I wasn't available to talk because I needed time for myself or wanted to spend time with other friends, Vekoma would become upset and attempt to pull my attention back to him. During confrontations, he often reacted emotionally, and while I felt guilty for not responding immediately, I genuinely needed time to process and respond properly. I wasn't ignoring him, I was trying to protect my own well-being.

After all of that, I realized that I wanted to get better on my own, and I wanted him to get better too. This relationship was actively worsening both of our mental states, and I really couldn't ignore that longer. I was also hiding from my friends with the fact that I had relapsed, which weighed heavily on me. I hadn't told anyone about my relapse yet, but I reached out to others for advice about the relationship, specifically about the expectation that I be available 24/7. Every response I received confirmed the same thing, the relationship was unhealthy.

Eventually, I found the courage to end the relationship. In response, Vekoma begged me to stay and threatened to kill himself if I left. Despite how painful that was, I stood my ground, because I knew that staying would only make things worse for both of us.

( My response)

After about an hour, Vekoma blocked me. I was kind of hurt, because despite everything, I still wanted to remain friends just to check in on his well-being. A few hours later, I was contacted by his former friend, who messaged me to show him bragging about calling me out publicly. I was hurt. What about my mental health? Was mine not important too? I acknowledge that I hurt him, but he hurt me as well. Trying to cover up his actions while placing all the blame on me is unfair.

Yes

Because

I was

"defending" you

On drawing and saying stuff

They texted this and blocked me

They also kicked me out the gc when they said they'll do a thread

They were shittalking you bruh

He could have stopped me. He could have set boundaries. Instead, he encouraged harmful behavior, which contributed to both of us relapsing during our recovery.

I'm exhausted from feeling guilty for someone who continues to deflect responsibility and portray themselves as the victim. Covering up his actions while making me feel like I was entirely at fault has caused immense damage.

We did talk about this privately, but at this point, conversation cannot undo the harm that was done. I have been hurt so deeply that I can no longer keep this inside.

If Vekoma is reading this: do not contact me. You have hurt me enough, and that boundary is final. I never want to speak to you again.

Despite everything, I genuinely hope you recover. But your actions caused serious mental and physical harm to me. I have never felt this hurt in a relationship, especially one where I felt so safe and vulnerable because I believed you would help me heal.

I don't want anyone else to be hurt the way I was. People deserve to be aware of your behaviour. I was mentally unstable, and you took advantage of that, then turned around and made me feel like I was entirely to blame when you called me out.

At this point, I don't believe an apology would help me. This callout is not made out of spite, but out of necessity. People should know the truth about you.

I really can't watch you be portrayed as the "innocent one." any longer anymore.

Please look at the evidence tab right after this oh my god i cant keep with you guys saying "ermm theres no evidence" THERE IS SCREENSHOTS THAT GO ALONG WITH WHAT I SAID
